Ugly Word, Revolution Gronau Flies on Three Died, Defiant To Help Cotton

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

IT WAS simple for our government of "best minds" to snub the Russian government because it wouldnt repay millions that American bankers lent to the Czar and Kerensky, but there are other "red" things outside of Russia to worry these best minds.

There is threat of revolution in the Argentine. The President of that South American republic, living in his dwelling as in a fortified castle, summons warships to his display of military strength.

Brazil sends news of threatening revolution.

The President of Peru has been kidnaped.

India and Egypt worry the British.

China worries the whole world.

Lower prices for stocks, lack of employment, diminished output, worry us.

The world had its war, its assorted prosperity booms, and now it has the pleasure of paying for both.

• • •

MOST SERIOUS for the fifty-nine or sixty-four that govern by the power of organized money, according to ex-Ambassador Gerard, is the world-wide threat of revolution.

It is hard to believe, but just conceivable, that the number of human beings on earth might become more important than the number of organized dollars.

Mr. Shillito, quoted in the "Christian Century," describes Russia's "bold and unfaltering offer of an alternative to the old order." That means government for men, instead of for profits.

Our best minds would do well to think about that.

VON GRONAU, who flew here from Germany unannounced in an old Dornier plane, is one that does something "the next day." On Thursday he was welcomed officially by New York City. Early yesterday morning he was flying over Albany headed toward Buffalo on his way to Chicago. He is there, as you read this, and will see the entire "Who's Who in the Air."

THE DEATH ROOM in Sing Sing prison adds a chapter to its long story entitled "How Men Die."

Jesse Thomas, William P. Force and Claude Udwin all went out of the world over the electric route in fifteen minutes.

The police called them "just three tough mugs," and they died tough.

Thomas, called "two gun," gazing around the death room, remarked, "I will see you all in hell some day," then shouted, "Let it go!" and went out.

Force, the second killed, said to the executioner, "What are you so nervous about, there, brother? Take it easy."

To spectators, nervously fidgeting, Force said: "You all came to see this. You wanted blood——" The current interrupted him.

Udwin, last of the three, looked at the electric chair with a forced grin, saying, "Well, well, well, well."

Before the metal death cap was snapped on his head, he said, "This is an exploring trip for me. Let's go." And as the cap was fitted,

LAWYER HELD FOR MURDER ENDS OWN LIFE

A. D. Payne Dies in Amarillo, Tex., Jail Cell After Exploding Nitroglycerin.

IS INDICTED FOR KILLING

Wife Killed and Son Maimed in Dynamite Blast in Automobile in June.

By The Associated Press

AMARILLO, Tex., Aug. 30—Carrying out a promise to "cheat the electric chair," for the bomb murder of his wife, A. D. Payne, Amarillo attorney, killed himself in his cell by setting off an explosion beneath his body as he lay on a cot early today.

Payne, who had confessed placing an infernal machine in the family automobile which killed Mrs. Payne and maimed his small son June 12, apparently used a small bottle of nitroglycerin to end his life.

Potter county authorities were seeking to determine how Payne smuggled the explosive into the jail and whether he had any outside aid.

"To Cheat Chair"

A few hours before he committed suicide, Payne who had described himself as "the meanest man in the world" told other prisoners in the county jail he was going to "end it all" in order to "cheat the electric chair." He said he would never go to trial.

The explosive was contained in a small bottle which the slayer wore suspended about his neck by a piece of string. He had kept it concealed from jail attendants but the bottle was seen by other prisoners last night

Payne had not changed his clothes since being placed in jail and slept in his shirt and trousers, leading officers to believe that he brought the explosive into the jail with him and had kept it hidden about his person.

PARTIES CLASH IN ARGENTINE

Two Wounded, One High Official, During Period of Intermittent Fighting.

By The Associated Press

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 30—Demonstrations by adherents of President Yrigoyen in the streets of the capital provoked fighting and intermittent firing with rival factions last night. Two persons, one of them a high official, were wounded in two separate clashes.

About 5,000 Yrigoyenistas in motor cars and lorries passed through the principal streets shouting "viva Yrigoyen." When the demonstration reached the front of the social club, "Circulo de Armas," an individual standing on the sidewalk fired a pistol into the midst of the crowd.

The demonstrators replied in like manner, about six shots being exchanged in all. When the shooting was over one of the demonstrators, a division chief of territorial police, was found wounded in the leg.

Earlier another shooting affray took place in front of one of the Yrigoyenista political clubs. One radical, as the political followers of the president are known, was seriously wounded.

Borah Slips

Will Rogers Special

TAHOE TAVERN, Cal., Aug. 30—Did you read about the nominations in the state of Ihado?

You remember Senator Borah used to be quite a favorite up there? Well, I never saw a man going back so fast as he is.

Why the other day there was actually half of one county that wasn't for him, for a unanimous nomination. The Democrats shouldn't have nominated an opponent against him, for he is the best Democrat in America.

But that half a county being against him shows you can't be at the top always. Yours,

Will Rogers

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE DIFFERS FROM RUTH

Illinois Dry Organization Looking for Independent Candidate To Back in Race for Senate.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Aug. 30—The Anti-Saloon League of Illinois, finding the prohibition stand of Ruth Hanna McCormick, Republican senatorial nominee, "entirely unsatisfactory," announced last night it was ready to support a dry independent candidate.

George B. Safford, league superintendent, issued a statement in which he said the entire influence of his organization would be exerted for "any worthy candidate" brought out by the dry forces.

The state anti-saloon league worked actively for Mrs. McCormick when she was campaigning for congresswoman and it supported her passively in her primary campaign against Senator Charles S. Deneen.

The injection of an independent candidate into the race between Mrs. McCormick and James Hamilton Lewis, Democrat, was forecast by Safford although he mentioned no names.

Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill of Downers Grove, Illinois' first woman legislator, has been prominently mentioned by the Chicago press as the choice of the dry leaders.

Mrs. O'Neill, a Republican, campaigned for Senator Deneen in his losing primary battle with Mrs.

Former Governor Not To Be Delegate to State Convention.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 30—Omission of the name of Alfred E. Smith from the list of delegates to the Democratic state convention was the subject of considerable speculation in political circles today.

It had been understood the former governor and national leader of the party had been chosen to place in nomination Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt for a second term.

Charles L. Kohler, leader of the district in which Mr. Smith lives, said:

"Governor Smith never told me he wanted to be a delegate. I would have been only too glad to have him, but I assumed he would prefer to go from the old first district, where he had made his home for many years."

Smith only recently moved to his present Fifth avenue address from the first district.

Kohler offered to give up his own seat to Mr. Smith should he wish it.

James J. Farley, of the Democratic state committee, said:

"Omission of Mr. Smith's name must be due to some mistake. It is difficult to understand, however, how it happened."

It was pointed out that failure to list the former governor as a delegate would not necessarily preclude his attendance at the convention in that capacity as proxies undoubtedly will be proffered by scores of delegates.

VETERAN INJURED

MT. VERNON, O., Aug. 30—Byron Peters of Columbus, Civil war veteran who was a member of the body guard at President Lincoln's funeral, was injured slightly here today when his automobile was forced from the road and overturned. 2 PLEAD NOT GUILTY; HELD TO GRAND JURY

Third Man Arrested in Federal Raids on Clubs To Be Arraigned Today.

CASES COME UP OCT. 28

Kalkbrenner and Inges Before Toledo Court on Liquor Charge.

Herman Kalkbrenner and James Inges, reputed owners of two clubs raided Thursday night by federal prohibition agents, yesterday pleaded not guilty to charges of sale and possession of liquor and maintaining nuisances when they were arraigned in Toledo federal court.

Both were bound over to the federal grand jury which will consider the cases on Oct. 28. Kalkbrenner's bond was set at $2,000 and that of Inges at $1,000, both of which were furnished and the men freed.

Eddie Collins, alleged bartender at one of the places, is to be arraigned before the Toledo court today, according to reports.

Kalkbrenner is said to be the owner of the Englewood club, two miles south of the city on the Prospect road, where federal operatives seized a large quantity of alleged liquor and beer. The raid is reported to have netted 765 pints of beer, 55 pints of whisky and 20 quarts of wine.

At the Monticello club, which is located on Harding highway W, agents are reported to have found on liquor but they arrested Inges on the strength of an alleged "buy" the officers are reported to have made at a previous visit.

The raids were made first at the Englewood club and then at the Monticello establishment, both of which have private membership lists.

SEARCHING FOR RUM RUNNERS

Two Officers Killed Last Night in Attempt To Stop Liquor Truck.

By The Associated Press

ALTUS, Okla., Aug. 30—Posses continued a search today for alleged rum runners who last night shot and killed Elmer L. Carter, 32, a deputy sheriff, and seriously wounded Joe Whitt, Altus policeman, when they attempted to halt their truck, believed to contain a shipment of liquor for Borger, Texas.

Two brothers, Buster and Bernie Robertson, were held at Frederick, southwest of here, for investigation in connection with the shooting. Buster was suffering from two bullet wounds he had refused to explain.

The Robertsons were arrested at their home near Frederick a short time after the shooting by officers who were searching for the slayers of Carter.

Whitt, shot in the head, was semi-conscious, but hospital attendants said he had a chance to recover.

Informed by officers at Frederick that a liquor truck was in the Altus territory, Carter asked Whitt to accompany him. On a country road four miles southwest of here they ran onto the truck which was accompanied by a fast coupe acting as a convoy.

Allowing the coupe, in which two men were riding to pass, the officers attempted to halt the truck. Their commands were met with a volley of rifle fire. Both officers returned the fire, but the truck and coupe continued.

Whitt, unconscious, slumped to the ground. Carter crawled to the farm home nearly a quarter of a mile away, called for help and died.

AIR RACE TOLL GROWS TO 3

Plane Designer Dies Instantly as Ship Falls at Chicago Event.

By The Associated Press

CURTISS - REYNOLDS AIRPORT, CHICAGO, Aug. 30— The death toll had increased to three as the national air races zoomed into their eighth day.

The third person to be killed in a week of racing and stunting was George Fernic, aircraft designer of St. George, Staten Island, N. Y., who plunged to his death late yesterday in a plane he built himself.

The ship, of radical design featuring a short auxiliary wing, fell far from the 40,000 spectators but in the midst of closely parked airplanes. Pilots and mechanics dashed to safety but Fernic's plane smashed a ship which had just been flown in one of the races.

Fernic was dead when doctors reached him. The other fatalities of the week both resulted from the crash of a navy racing plane near

PARTY BATTLE MARKS POLITICS FOR WEEK

Recommendation of Mrs. LeVan for Committee Post Is Outstanding Event in State.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 30 — The Republican state central committee this week overrode the counsel of administration leaders and voted a recommendation to the national committee for appointment of Mrs. Wilma Sinclair LeVan of Steubenville to the Ohio vacancy on the national committee.

At the same time a caucus of Democratic state candidates with Henry G. Brunner of Mansfield, chairman of the state executive committee, decided that advocacy of prohibition repeal would not be a part of the state platform.

Stormy Session

Mrs. LeVan's recommendation was approved after a stormy session in which Fred Warner of Marion, former chairman of the state executive committee and Raleigh Reese of Youngstown, led the fight against administration representatives.

Followers of Walter F. Brown of Toledo, postmaster general and close adviser of President Hoover, of Maurice Maschke of Cleveland, political leader and national committeeman and Edward D. Schorr of Cincinnati, newly elected chairman of the Republican central committee and director of commerce in Governor Cooper's cabinet, voted to table the resolution. The motion lost 20 to 21.

The committee then unanimously approved Mrs. LeVan for the vacancy caused by the death of Mrs. Hugh Clark of Steubenville, a Hoover follower.

Political observers said the vote that won a victory for Mrs. LeVan's friends on the committee came from Arthur A. Nixon of Dayton, former chairman of the committee who withdrew as a candidate for reelection after the administration put Schorr up as its candidate. Miss Gertrude Jones of Findlay was elected vice chairman succeeding Mrs. Louise Ogden De Voe of Ash-

PLANE BURNS; PILOT ESCAPES

Leap from Blazing Ship on Marion Airport Saves Salesman.

What might have been a serious accident was narrowly averted today about 12:30 p .m. as Pilot H. A. Knapp, regional salesman of the Curtiss-Wright Airplane Co., brought his flaming Curtiss plane to the ground safely at Marion airport on the Kenton pike, west of the city.

Knapp was gliding into the airport from Columbus to land when his ship burst into flames, presumably from the motor backfiring and setting fire to the carburetor. The plane almost instantly became a mass of flames. As the ship hit the ground Knapp leaped from it, the plane rolling to a stop without control.

A fire call was sent to the city fire department and a pumper from Company No. 2 was dispatched to the airport. The plane was a total loss despite efforts of local firemen to subdue the flames. It was valued at $4,000 by the pilot.

STORMS SWEEP GREAT BRITAIN

One of Worst in History of Isles, Comes on Heels of Heat.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Aug. 30—One of the worst electric and rain storms in the history of British weather records swept northern England and Scotland during the night on the heels of a heat wave which has taken more than two score lives.

Southern England escaped most of the fury of the tempest. Londoners, who sweltered all week, had some rain and a cooling breeze which once reached a velocity of 20 miles per hour, but the city emerged unscathed, except for the flooding of low quarters in the east section where the rain was hardest.

Ramsay Mac Donald, prime minister, returning by airplane to his home at Lossiemouth, Scotland, from London, ran into the storm and was forced to turn back to Catterick Airdrome, Yorkshire. He boarded a train there for Scotland.

The north suffered widespread damage. The east coast of Scotland was virtually isolated from the rest of the British Isles. Telephone and telegraph communications were demoralized everywhere.

Russia Orders Two Americans from Country

By International News Service

MOSCOW, Aug. 30—A suspended sentence of two years' imprisonment was imposed by the Stalingrad authorities today on Lemuel Lewis of Detroit, and a Toledo engineer named Brown, found guilty of race discrimination after they had thrown a negro co-worker out of a factory mess hall, according to word received here.

Deportation from Soviet Russia and banishment for a period of ten years were substituted for the prison sentence.

Several days ago, from his jail cell in Stalingrad, Lewis addressed a petition to the local Soviet in which he expressed his regret over his "hasty action" which he said was due to "misguided chauvinism." He promised henceforth to spread the doctrine of racial tolerance if spared punishment for this offense.

TITLE MATCH AT NIGHT

Games, Contests and Ball Games Listed on Final Program Plans.

Marion's greatest civic event in years will be held Monday at Crystal Lake park when Labor day is observed with a program of addresses and contests, headlined by the appearance of Gov. Myers Y. Cooper.

Final arrangements for the affair have been completed by the Marion Central Labor Union assisted by a committee representing local civic organizations.

The program will get under way in the morning and will continue until late at night. Hundreds of out-of-town visitors are expected here during the day, which will be climaxed by a wrestling show and a fireworks display.

Full cooperation of the Columbus Federation of Labor was assured today with announcement that the Columbus organization will send a 30-piece band here to provide music for the occasion.

Ten thousand handbills advertising the celebration were to be distributed Saturday in towns and villages throughout the district. Francis Bacon, chairman of the advertising committee, is in charge of distributing the bills.

Train Speeds Through Marion As New Bellefontaine-Cleveland Mark Is Set

ANOTHER episode in the Casey Jones railroad speed drama was enacted yesterday as Engineman Joseph R. Coffey of Bellefontaine drove his train, The Missourian through Marion over the 135 mile stretch between Bellefontaine and Cleveland at an average speed of nearly 80 miles an hour to set a new record for the train's run between those points. Coffey was aided considerably in his efforts to set the new mark by the super stoking accomplished by Fireman F. D. Dagnan, also of Bellefontaine.

Leaving the Bellefontaine station 28 minutes behind schedule Coffey drove his train at a steady speed of nearly 80 miles an hour until he brought it into the Marion Union station with part of the lost time already made up. An unavoidable delay of 10 minutes, occasioned while waiting for a C. & O. freight train to clear the right of way again left The Missourian farther behind its regular time.

Rolling out of Marion Coffey drove his charge at record speed until he struck the grade between this city and Galion. Here his speed was cut to 65 miles an hour but it was quickly regained once he passed the crest of the grade. Another 10 minutes was lost as he stopped to take on water in Shelby.

From Shelby to Cleveland Coffey steadily cut down the Several Different Routes Announced for Motorists Desiring To Make Week-End Drive; All Are Free of Detours.

Cleveland and the lake shore near Ohio's largest city are offered by the Marion Auto club as part of trip local motorists can make over the week-end.

Several different routes which may be taken in either direction are available, and all are free of detours. Route 4 may be followed from Marion to Monroeville. Route 20 from Monroeville will take the traveler through Wakeman and Oberlin to Cleveland.

Another routing includes route 4 to Sandusky and route 2 from Sandusky east through Huron, Vermilion and Lorain to Cleveland. The road from Sandusky to Cleveland enables the motorist to catch frequent glimpses of Lake Erie.

A third route is route 4 from Marion to Bucyrus, route 5 from Bucyrus to Mansfield, and route 42 from Mansfield to Cleveland.

Mrs. D. V. Gallagher, secretary of the club, suggests that one of the routes be followed on the trip to the city and that a different routing be taken on the return to Marion.

Detours removed from state roads this week, according to a bulletin received by Mrs. Gallagher, include the short detour south of Bucyrus on route 4 and another on route 30 between Lima and Van Wert.

Route 23 is open to both Toledo on the north and to Portsmouth on the south, with the exception of a short detour near Circleville, south of Columbus. The best road to Cincinnati is route 23 to Delaware and route 42 from Delaware through London, Xenia and Lebanon, according to the bulletin.

The Stars Say—

For Sunday, August 31

Sunday's horoscope is prophetic of a sudden and quite unforeseen state of affairs which may prove to be radical as well as far-reaching in its effect on the life and its environment and contacts. It promises an abrupt upheaval, which, however, promises to open up splendid prospects and desirable adventures, but these may give rise to profound introspection or serious consideration as affecting the private affiliations.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year of quite unexpected change or removal, with the interests and private affairs suddenly projected into new directions and personal contacts and environment. The personal reactions to this upheaval may tend toward serious contemplation or introspection. But all should give welcome opportunity for success and happiness. A child born on this day may have much ingenuity, skill and original creative genius, at the same time having an inner vision steady and profound. It should make a spectacular success of its life.

For Monday, September 1

Monday's astrological forecast stresses affairs artistic, social, domestic and romantic, although business may be expected to run along in accustomed grooves. There is hint of minor changes or journeys, but these may be auxiliary to the development of the aforesaid personal activities. The mental attitude may be uplifted and aspiring, with a leaning toward poetry, music and mysticism.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year in which the domestic, affectional, social and artistic activities may be uppermost in the attention. In this connection there may be change or travel, although business is under fairly safe auspices. The trend of mind may however be to the cultural, utopian or mystical rather than the solidly practical. A child born on this day should be kindly, lovable, popular in its personal life, leaning toward the higher and finer expressions of of art, music, literature and mysticism.

For Tuesday, September 2

CONFLICTING planetary influences prevail on this day, although the final issues devolve on personal stamina, resolution and self-restraint. There is promise of advancement and recognition in employment, good assistance for new undertakings but also there are tenacious obstacles and a dangerous personal tendency toward undue aggressiveness, impetuosity, turbulence and quarrels. Also a menace of fraud or treachery is shown in connection with carelessly handled papers or writings. But the mind will be keen, alert and shrewd.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year in which the outcome may be largely determined by the personal behavior and self-control. While advancement in employment and assistance in new projects are foreseen, yet there may be stubborn obstacles to overcome, and the tendency to rash and tempestuous conduct subdued. Fraud, treachery, litigation and disputes may call for judicious handling.

A child born on this day may be aggressive, ambitious, fiery and tempestuuus but efficient, enterprising and industrious. To succeed it should have amiability and self-control instilled in early life.

The high for this week came on Thursday when the clearings totaled $58,872.32 against the high for Friday of last week of $86,706.52, a decrease for this week of $27,734.22.

The only item in which an increase is shown for this week is the low total for any one day. The low mark for this week came on Wednesday when it mounted to $36,779.82. The low last week was on Wednesday when it was only $30,433.60 an increase for this week of $6,346.22.

"Dreams Do come true!"
"Boys and Girls, This Offers You a lifetime opportunity"

EARN A TOUR OF EUROPE OR A COLLEGE SCHOLARSHIP
W. E. Parks
For thirty years I have wanted to make this offer. From my own boyhood there remain vivid memories of bitter struggles for the advantages of education and travel. I have looked forward to the time when I might help worthy young people over the same rough spots, and this offer is the realization of that dream. I hope every boy and girl in this land between the ages of 12 and 19 will learn about this plan.
Next summer a happy crowd of boys and girls will receive from The Sparks-Withington Co., either a $750 College Scholarship or a tour of Europe with all expenses paid from the time they leave home until their return. My friends have prevailed upon me to conduct the tour personally. But this is not all. Every boy or girl who works for one of these awards will be paid for whatever success they have, regardless of whether or not they win a Scholarship or Tour.
The work will be interesting and easy. You will not be expected to sell anything. You will be under the personal guidance of a responsible business man in your own community, who will help you succeed.
It costs you nothing to take advantage of this offer. It isn't a game where only a few win and others receive nothing. It is an opportunity for you ALL to work, to produce results, to earn money and to be rewarded in exact proportion to what you accomplish. In addition to the boys and girls from every section of the United States and Canada who win the Grand Awards of a College Scholarship or European Tour—every successful boy and girl will win cash. No effort will go unrepaid.
This offer ends April 15th, 1931. Time is precious, so don't delay. The Sparton dealers listed below will give you full and complete information about this lifetime opportunity that I am offering you. Get in touch with them at once. Simply tell them that you want to know more about the Sparton Scholarship Award. They are expecting you and will furnish everything you need to start at once. Decide to enter right now.

The Three R's of Insurance as taught by Larie
RECENT surveys show that—to insure or not to insure is no longer the question. Today practically every property is insured against fire. And yet there is an enormous total value not covered by insurance, in the form of property that is under-insured. Such cases are usually the result of failure to increase insurance coverage as value has increased, or of neglect to make proper inventory or appraisal before applying for a policy.
Read the list of risks other than fire which we write policies to cover. No doubt there are several which apply to you. Many of the losses may be more keenly felt than those by fire. Insurable risks may mean your livelihood and should losses not be preventable, provision may be made for replacement.
Right today is the time to correct such a condition as is described above, if it exists with your property. The necessary cost will be but a trifle and should the inevitable loss occur you will be well repaid. Let us help make your inventory and give you adequate protection.
Of Course You Know that in addition to FIRE this agency writes:
Lightning;
Explosion;
Leasehold;
Automobile;
Earthquake;
Mail Package;
Water Damage;
Radium: All Risks;
Use and Occupancy;
Sprinkler Leakage;
Salesmen's Samples;
Fine Arts: All Risks;
Profits; Commissions;
Windstorm and Tornado;
Rents and Rental Value;
Aircraft—Property Damage;
Transportation Floater;
Rain and Weather Cover;
Ocean and Inland Marine;
Jewelry and Furs: All Risks;
Agents Contingent Commissions;
Personal Effects (Tourist Floater);
Riot; Civil Commotion and Invasion.
Years build up an insurance agency just so rapidly and so high as it deserves. Each satisfied patron recommends it to his friends. They, in turn are well pleased and soon an enviable reputation for service and dependability is securely established.

Rogers Eloquent Over California Scenery, Bears And Cowboys After Touring Yosemite With Fred Stone

Hospitals Provided for Those Who Feed Bears at Park by Hand.

BY WILL ROGERS

Well all I know is just what I read in the papers, or what I see when prowling. Wal Sir a week or so ago had a great trip. We were starting to go to the famous Lake Tahoe in California to film the old Frank Bacon play "Lightnin'" right on the ground that it was laid on. You know it was a hotel on the Nevada and California line, and the Divorcees would stop there and it had a California address but in reality you would be living in Nevada.

Well Fred Stone and his family were out at our little ranch at Santa Monica spending a little vacation with us, so we all decided to go up. We first hit out for Yosemite. I hate to admit it but I had never been there. My family had but not me, and Fred and his folks hadent been. If you never have been there, dont miss it. Its great sight. I am not going to tell you about it for you can get folders that can make it wilder than I can.

First place they have one of the most unique Hotels you ever saw. In fact lots of dandy places to stop. Everybody was apologising for the falls, as on account of the Republicans giving us no more rains than they have why there hasent been in year as little water coming over. But there was some, and it would give you an idea of where they were and what would happen to some water if it did happen along that way, what a drop it would get.

Everybody was apologizing for the falls.

We toook drives and we took walks, and then we had a Barbecue down the river bank on the gravel bar. They sure do know how to cook up steaks, and they sent their old Cowboy Banjo player and singer down and he was sure good. He had lots of old songs I hadent heard in years and he had some I had never heard. Then they had an awful good Cowboy Rope spinner and Fred and I got a kick out of him, for we had wrestled with one of those things long enough to know how hard it really was.

There was just 10 or 12 in the party, and then Fred picked up the old rope and he roped like he hadent been off it a day. It will take more than an Aeroplane to knock that Guy out. Then he sang a lot of his old songs from his various hits. I tried a little roping, but I was getting too old and fat. I took up eating again. Down there by the moonlight, and a campfire, and hemmed in by partitions that are three thousand feet straight up, I tell you New Yorks Yosemite, down in those Canyons cant touch it. You would see little deer playing around. Then we went to see the fire fall, on a high cliff. They build every night a big log fire, and as it burns into small embers, just at nine o'clock they push it over in a steady stream that lasts several minutes these burning embers, and here you are almost a mile straight down, and see this fall over this great precipice, and at one of the Camps a woman sang that beautiful Indian song, "The Waters of Minnetonka."

Well it was a beautiful sight. Then we went to see 'em feed the bears. There is lots of bears in there, and they take the garbage from the hotels, and have little pits built like tables, and spot lights up in the trees, and its on the bank of this beautiful little river, and all the crowd just across on the opposite side. They put all the food in these places, and then they turn the lights on, and all at once right across the river is all these old bears, fussing and eating, and playing. They put food up on an old standing tree trunk, and they climb up there for it, and then the Naturalist of the park gives a very entertaining talk on them. They go to sleep in the fall in caves and old trunks of trees, and they dont come out or wake up till spring, and their little ones are born during this sleep, and they only weigh about a pound at birth, and they sleep and suck their paw.

Bears Fed at Park

They feed 'em, otherwise they would break in people's tents to get their bacon, or they will go into a car when parked at night if they smell food in there. You are not supposed to feed em from your hand but they have a hospital there for the ones that do. Well we started early the next morning, and went out of their in our cars, by the eastern way, the Tiago Route, and it is without a doubt the most beautiful trip I ever saw. Its about 225 miles from there to Lake Tahoe, by way of Mcna Lake and thats the one where there is nothing lives in.

I don't know why, for they dident have any naturalist there to tell us. Thats how come me to know so much about the bears. They are getting very fine roads, that is for mountain roads all over these places, and touring through America now is really becoming a real pleasure.

We swung over into Nevada from all this Big Trees and Pine timber, down into the desert Country, then by the most beautiful watered valleys, with mighty pretty Cow ranches in em, that made my mouth water. Then up over another high mountain pass and there was this wonderful Lake Tahoe, over six thousand feet up in the air, with one hundred miles of shore line, and nobody knows how deep, and beautiful and marvelous places all around it. Its right in the heart of all the old California and Nevada mining places that have made history.

Virginia City Visited

The State line runs through the lake. We drove over to Virginia City, the mining town that built the great San Francisco, $800,000,000 eight hundred million taken from there. Now its just almost a Ghost town. Its Mark Twains old town where he worked on the paper. Fred crawled in the window of the old Opera House, and dug around in the dressing rooms and stage. That was the hit of the trip with him. He said he had never played there in the early days but he had played lots of em like it, around the middle west.

Then to Carson City, Nevada, one of the most picturesque and historic old State Capitols we have, saw where Corbett and Fitsimmons fought the famous "Solar Plexus" fight. Fred got a kick out of that for he used to box with Corbett all during his Championship days, and Corbett always said he would have been a Champion middleweight if he had taken it up as a profession. He was always the best boxer, (and Fighter) of any Actor we ever had on the stage. Then to Reno, which is only forty miles from the lake. But Reno I will have to take a whole Chapter to tell you about it, and its "Industry". But if you want to have a good time, I dont care where you live, just load in your Kids, and take some congenial friends, and just start out, you would be surprised what there is to see in this great Country within 200 miles of where any of us live. I dont care what State or what town. I tell you Henry Ford has been good to us.

RUSH FOR BUILDING PERMITS ENDS HERE

Slump Shown Here with $3,780 as Total Value of Planned Construction.

The issuance of building permits for the last week underwent a decided slump, the records of City Clerk Sylvester Larkin show. The total value of all the permits issued amounts to only $3,780 while for the last several weeks the total has been mounting up to several times that amount.

A large number of those issued during the preceding period have been for the construction of filling stations.

A large number of filling station permits were taken out for the purpose of evading any zoning law which may be put into effect in the future. There is no zoning ordinance in effect now so stations may be located where the owners desire.

The persons to whom the permits were issued the last week, the type of construction and the address for which the permits were issued and their cost follow: John Wissler, garage at 564 North State street to cost $100; Herman F. and Maude E. Blank, workshop at 137 Columbia street to cost $100; George Grass, garage at 461 North Grand avenue to cost $80; G. W. Moore, garage at 908 Congress street to cost $70; Richard Gamble, front porch at 296 Green street to cost $50; Railway Express Agency, remodel shed at Union station to cost $300; Wade L. Smith, residence on Olney avenue to cost $2,000; garage at same address to cost $100; S. S. Kresge Co., remodel store at 141 West Center street to cost $1,000

Two Conferences Will Hold Interests of Ohio Methodists

Sessions Will Be Held at Bucyrus and Oxford

Merger of German and English Branches of Church in This Section Will Be Considered at Crawford County Seat Next Week.

Two Ohio Methodist conferences next week, in the northern and southern sections of the state, will be closely connected in interest, although at widely separated places.

The activities of the Central German conference at Bucyrus, which will draw ministers and laymen from Ohio and adjacent states, will be watched closely by both German and English Methodists in this section of the country. It will take action towards a merger with the English church. The Ohio conference of the English church will be in session at Oxford Sept. 2-8, and the German conference will open Tuesday and close Sunday, Sept 7.

The merger of the two conferences will result in the transfer of Rev. Karl W. Patow's congregation of the Prospect Street M. E. church to the Ohio conference, which includes Epworth and Wesley M. E. churches here of which Dr. C. E. Turley and Rev. W. Martell George are pastors.

Leaders To Speak

The program of the German conference will include prominent ministers from Ohio, Kentucky, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Pennsylvania. Rev. Patow will deliver the opening prayer.

Next Sunday, Sept. 7, the Prospect Street church will hold no morning services in order that the congregation may attend the Sunday morning conference session at which Bishop Thomas Nicholson of Detroit will preach.

Dr. Turley and Rev. George will attend the Ohio conference session at Oxford. The campus of Miami university at Oxford will be the meeting place for the conference, with headquarters in Benton hall.

The Lord's Supper will be celebrated Tuesday at 2 p. m., opening the conference, followed by a memorial services at 3 conducted by Rev. J. R. Stanforth. After this service the conference will organize for business.

Dr. Alfred H. Upham, president of the university, will welcome the conference and visitors at 7:30 p. m. His address will be followed by a demonstration of "Worship in the Church School." Bishop H. Lester Smith of the Chattanooga area will deliver an address.

A prayer service will be held each day at 6:30 a. m. in McGuffey auditorium and a devotional service will be conducted at 8:30 a. m. by Bishop Edgar Blake.

After the regular morning services Thursday the Wesley Foundation work will be considered, with Bishop Fisher leading the discussion. The day will close with the anniversary of the Board of Foreign Missions and an address by Dr. Ralph E. Diffendorfer of New York City.

Joint Session Friday

From 2:30 to 4 p. m. Friday there will be a joint session of the annual and lay conferences, with addresses by Dr. Oxnam and Bishop Fisher. At 6 p. m. there will be a social service banquet and a father and son banquet.

God Everywhere

A SERMONETTE

BY PAUL H. BOURQUIN
Pastor Salem Evangelical Church

"WHEN thou wast under the fig tree, I saw thee." John, 1:48

These words show us a beautiful picture, Nathaniel praying under the fig tree.

From this picture, we first observe: That God is present everywhere. Although we know better, we are apt to confine Him in Heaven, or our church. It's true in a special sense that He is present in Heaven, and in the houses or places dedicated for His worship. But in fact, He is present everywhere. There is no place so obscure that the worker of inquity can hide himself from God, as God says through Jeremiah, the prohet, "Can any hide himself in secret places that I shall not see him? Do I not fill Heaven and Earth? saith the Lord."

He saw Nathaniel under the fig tree. He saw Adam and Eve as they tried to conceal themselves. He saw Abraham with his son Isaac on Mt. Moriah. He saw Hagar in the wilderness with her son Ishmael. He saw Elijah in the lonely cave. He saw Peter in the inner dungeon. He saw Paul in the storm tossed ship on the coast of Malta. By His Spirit He is as truely with us as He was with those men and women of old. The apostle says: "He is not far from each one of us, for in Him we live and move and have our being". And the Psalmist says in those familiar words: "Yea, though I walk through the valley of death, I fear no evil, for Thou art with me; Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me."

Sees Us Praying

The next thing our text impresses us with is: That God takes special notice when we are praying. Jesus took special notice of Nathaniel under the fig tree because he was praying there; other wise Jesus would never have mentioned it. That's what the Lord took special notice of, also in the case of Saul. We remember, the Lord appeared to Ananias of Damascus in a vision and said to him: 'Ananias, arise and go to the street which is called Straight, and inquire in the house of Judas for one named Saul, a man of Tarsus; for behold he prayeth." The Lord took special notice of the humble publican in the temple who smote on his breast and said: "God be merciful to me a sinner." The Lord is delighted when He sees us in earnest prayer.

The next thing our text suggests is that we should have a particular place for prayer. Nathaniel had such a place, under the favored fig tree where he was not disturbed Jacob had such a place on all his journeys, He built an altar, and that was his special place of worship and prayer. The Lord Jesus as He was here on Earth had such special places on certain mountains, in the wilderness where He spent the 40 days and 40 nights in private fellowship with God, and in the Garden of Gethsemane. And Jesus enjoins us: "When thou prayeth, enter into thy closet, and shut the door, and pray to thy Father in secret."

The Mohammedans tell us that one prayer offered in Mecca is worth 80,000 prayers offered anywhere else. The followers of some other religions entertain similar beliefs. And Christ plainly taught that there is a place of prayer which has special importance. It is the secret place. George Washington often prayed in secret. It is said when encamped in the woods, he always reserved for himself a thicket where he could pray undisturbed.

Never Forgotten.

Finally, we learn from our text: God will honor and bless those who earnestly pray to Him.

Nathaniel prayed in secret, under the fig tree and the Lord honored him by calling him to be one of His disciples. His name will never be forgotten, as one who stood nearest to the Master while He was here on earth. And as one who worked and labored and died for the cause of the Master.

Constantine the Great was one day looking at some statues of some noted men who were represented standing And he said, "I shall have mine taken kneeling; for that is how I have risen to eminence." That is the way all great men and women in the records of the Bible and in the records of history have risen to eminence.

When Philip Melanchton was seriously ill at Weimar in 1541, Martin Luther literally almost stormed the heights of Heaven with his prayer for Melanchton. And he came and took Melanchton by his hand and said; "Be of good comfort, Philip, you will not die. Our Lord must hear me. I have pleaded all his promises on prayer in the Holy Scripture I could think of, so that He must hear me." Melanchton awoke as out of a deep swoon. He began to breath deeply and regularly. New life burst through his veins, and he became well. He afterward said: "I would have died, had Luther not snatched me from death's doors with his prayers." Thus God honors and rewards those who earnestly and fervently pray.

PLAN FOR BALLOON RACE

Cleveland Awaiting Nineteenth International Gas Bag Event.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 30—Roaring squadrons of the air mobilized here today for a two-day aeronautical carnival which reaches its peak with the start of the nineteenth annual International Gordon Bennett balloon race late Monday.

The show will bring out in sharp contrast the changes in aviation since the first free balloon to carry a passenger went aloft in Paris 147 years ago. Tomorrow and Monday there will be demonstrations of all types of aircraft and planes will thunder through formations and stunts leading up to the balloon race when six silken bags flying the colors of four nations will drift with the wind in a contest of distance.

The celebration will open tomorrow with an international gliding contest.

Late Monday will come the start of the International balloon race, one of the world's greatest sporting events. Six pilots and their aides will go aloft in huge gas bags, subjecting themselves to the whims of the weather and depending on the wind and their own flying skill to take them safely the greatest distance. Most of them count on remaining in the air the better part of two days and coming down on the bleak Labrador coast.

ANOTHER "BUY A BALE OF cotton" movement, like the one started 16 years ago when cotton fell to 10 cents a pound, is suggested. The idea is to buy the cotton, help the farmer now, make a profit later.

Those that bought the cotton at 10 cents a pound, 16 years ago, all made money.

But as Mr. Hamilton, editor of the Augusta Chronicle, says, the "buy a bale movement" has an unpleasant suggestion of philanthropy. It sounds like the little flower girl's "buy a posie" appeal.

The South doesn't care for a repetition of that.

Anybody buying cotton now, on a business basis, and storing it, will make money. An essential cannot remain indefinitely below the normal cost of production.

A better way to help cotton would be for American citizens to imitate Mussolini, who in Summer time wears all-cotton clothing, from his yachting cap to his shoes of cotton cloth.

If Mr. Cresap of Chicago, who understands clothing, or some other great manufacturer or mail order house, would create a suit of men's Summer cotton clothing, to sell for about $10 a suit or less, and make such suits fashionable through advertising, there would be better prices for cotton and greater comfort for men in summer time.

Earl R. Lewis, of St. Clairsville, a former state senator, was chosen as campaign chairman for the Republican organization.

Republicans will hold their state convention here Sept. 11 and 12. The date for the Democratic caucus has not been selected.

The caucus of candidates on the Democratic ticket resulted in statements from George White of Marietta, gubernatorial nominee, and Robert J. Bulkley, of Cleveland, senatorial nominee, in which they said complete harmony reigned in the party and that the prohibition question would not be a part of the state platform.

Bulkley, who was nominated on a platform advocating repeal of the eighteenth amendment and all enforcement acts, said that prohibition was a national issue and as such would be a part of his personal campaign.

The statements said that the question would not be brought into the state campaign as it might cause the people to lose sight of other important issues pertinent to state affairs.

The Democratic central committee organization meeting was a quiet affair. Earl Hanefeld of Ottawa, was reelected chairman, and other officers were Mrs. Luetta Peabody McGruder of Oberlin, vice chairman; Clarence N. Greer of Dayton, secretary, and W. A. Julian of Cincinnati, treasurer.

The central committee reelected Henry G. Brunner of Mansfield, as chairman of the executive committee; Miss Marie McCurry of Columbus, as secretary and Robert Hayes of Columbus, treasurer.

Hearing was postponed and an officer took Mr. Reynolds to a nearby restaurant. "Pardon me, officer!" exclaimed the prisoner, rising from the table. "This coffee is hot, I must get some water to cool it. I hate hot coffee."

He vanished through a rear door.

FIGHTS FOR LIFE

Woman Shot By Relative Who Commits Suicide.

By International News Service

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., Aug. 30—Shot twice by her brother-in-law, who then committed suicide, Mrs. Nettie Perham, 40 years old, of Pownal, was making a struggle for life in a hospital here today.

The woman's assailant was Marshall Perham, 55, a brother of Leon Perham who was given a life sentence in 1903 for complicity in the slaying of Mark Rogers.

A family quarrel precipitated the shooting. After pumping two bullets into his sister-in-law, Perham fired a single shot into his brain—killing himself instantly.

LAWYER HELD FOR MURDER ENDS LIFE

were dislodged from their cots. A sleeping cell mate was uninjured. Payne died laying face down in his cot.

Indicted for Murder

The lawyer's death followed by a few hours his indictment for first degree murder. Late yesterday he was visited by two of his children, whom he greeted with a hysterical display of affection.

The attorney gave a letter to his mother and one to the mother of his wife into the keeping of a fellow prisoner shortly after midnight. The explosion took place a few minutes later.

He had asked a group of fellow prisoners to leave his cell, telling them they would know what the bottle suspended from his neck contained "in a few minutes."

He had frequently boasted he would never stand trial.

Payne's wife was killed and his 11-year-old son maimed by a dynamite bomb which wrecked the family car June 12.

Weeks later he asked Gene Howe, Amarillo newspaper editor, to investigate the case, saying civil authorities were making no progress.

Confesses Plot

Howe's investigation led to Payne's arrest. He confessed killing his wife because of love for his stenographer, Miss Verona Thompson. He confessed to four previous attempts to end his wife's life.

They were college sweethearts.

Officers investigating the explosion today said they had not noticed the small bottle suspended from Payne's neck. They said he had not removed his clothing since his arrest.

Prisoners, however, noticed the bottle, they said, and asked about its contents.

The county physicians who examined the body said death was instantaneous.

After his indictment yesterday the attorney's brothers said they would seek to save him from the electric chair through a plea of insanity.

Denies Insanity

Payne steadfastly denied he was insane. In his confession which he dictated for nearly 24 hours Payne said he killed his wife to keep her from the knowledge of his love for Miss Thompson and his embezzlement of family funds.

He said he had at different times so arranged a shotgun that it would be discharged by opening a closet door, put poison in his wife's food, attempted to drown her and failed to explode.

Payne's maimed child, whom he confessed he tried to kill with his mother, was one of the children who visited him in jail yesterday.

The attorney walked to town with one of his daughters the morning his wife was killed leaving the family car with its deadly cargo of dynamite for her to use.

BELIEVE MOONSHINER HAS FLED TO VALLEY

Wanted for Murder of Game Warden and Eugene Policeman.

By The Associated Press

EUGENE, Ore., Aug. 30 — Vic Sutherland, 67, alleged Marcola, Ore., moonshiner, wanted for the murder of Joe Saunder, deputy game warden, and Oscar Duley, Eugene policeman, was believed hiding today somewhere in the fastness of the Mohawk valley near here. A large posse armed with rifles and machine guns prepared to renew its search for him.

Darkness last night brought a halt to the activities of 50 possemen who sought Sutherland throughout yesterday. With two officers dead and two others wounded by shots said to have been fired by Sutherland, the posse feared to face the fugitive's guns in the darkness. Lee Bown and Rodney Roech, deputy sheriffs, were the wounded men. They were recovering.

Duley was wounded fatally Thursday night when he halted a liquor-laden automobile driven by Sutherland. About an hour later Saunders, Bown and Roach forced open the door of the [illegible] residence in search of the [illegible] killer.

SEARCH CONTINUES FOR CHILD SLAYER

Rewards for Murderer Now Reach Total of $3,100.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Aug. 30 — The kidnaper and slayer of 8-year-old Marverine Appel remained at large today, while police continued to follow every clew that might lead to solution of the crime.

Rewards totaling $3,100 have been offered for apprehension of the man believed to have enticed the girl into his automobile last Wednesday evening, to have held her prisoner for almost thirty hours, and finally to have attacked and killed her. Her body, the throat bound with wire and a gash in the head, was found Thursday night two blocks from the home of her mother, Mrs. Eula Appel.

Police had failed today to establish any connection between the kidnaping of Marverine, and an attack yesterday afternoon on Mrs. Joseph Wisnienski, by two men. She fought them off and tore a piece of clothing from one of them before police arrived.

Several suspected persons were questioned by police, but were later released.

Hoover: the Issue.

Simeon D. Fess, Ohio's senator-chairman of the Republican party, chooses to make the Hoover administration the issue in the 1930 congressional elections. Its bearing on the qualifications of certain Republicans seeking election is a bit dubious, but that is for those candidates to interpret. Other more regular Republicans will, no doubt, welcome the opportunity to stand with the administration. As a matter of fact, had not Chairman Fess chosen to make his battle on administration lines he might have lacked a foe. The Democrats already had leveled their guns at the President.

So it is that Mr. Hoover will become between now and November more than ever a political figure for one party to pelt and another to praise. In one sense he is the symbol of the Republican party; in another and a wider sense he is the symbol of the "ins." That makes him an object upon which all "outs"—dissatisfied Republicans, Democrats and all others—can vent their spleen. Senator Fess believes Mr. Hoover can take it all and come through smiling. In his radio speech last Monday night he enumerated a few of the reasons for this faith in the President's ability to take punishment.

Discounting as mild bombast the senator's statement that "the record of the accomplishment by the party in eighteen months • • • has never before been paralleled in any eighteen months of any administration heretofore," the enumeration names fulfillment of all platform pledges made at the last Republican convention as the most important accomplishment. Senator Fess reviews the accomplishment of the administration in three groupings: domestic policies; leadership in the stock market depression and the drouth, and advancement of world peace. The last of these will be ranked as the greatest in future history, the senator believes.

Farm relief, prohibition, tariff legislation—these are the domestic policies which the administration has upheld to the best interests of the public. Senator Fess believes they will contribute to maintaining the "greatness of the republic," does not recognize that section of opinion which declares to the contrary. The economic depression was the result of worldwide conditions; the drouth was similarly unavoidable. In each of these emergencies Mr. Hoover acted with commendable sureness and accuracy, Senator Fess claims. It is a formidable presentation of the administration.

What have the opponents to offer? Senator Fess anticipates chiefly "flippant references to personality, employing a depression as the chief argument to get into power."

The tone of Senator Fess' keynote speech as national Republican chairman could have been predicted by an casual observer. He did exactly what he had to do. The Hoover administration was made the issue months ago; Senator Fess merely announced officially that the Republican party was willing to stand by its guns and take on all comers in defense of Mr. Hoover's record. The fact that the same things Republicans call his achievements are called failures by the Democrats is of no moment. That is politics.

Jumpers and Gliders.

It looks like some measure of dance reform—subject of sermons from the pulpit and dissertations from the parent—finally has been accomplished, but it's probably a deception. At any rate the sermons and the lectures haven't had anything to do with it.

We refer to the result produced by the existence of long skirts and slow, dreamy dance music at the same time. Like the gingerbread dog and the calico cat they have no apparent relation but, thrown together, are complementary one to the other.

A long skirt, of course, means sedateness. Slow music also contributes to that state. There can be slow dance music without long skirts, but no long skirts without slow dance music—at least not without tripping. At any rate, folks who found it boresome and even amusing not so many weeks ago to watch dancers jumping and gyrating have noticed a marked settling down into slower gliding movements. Critics find these movements graceful; dancers find them convenient for summer temperature and aforementioned considerations of the long skirt. For the present, therefore, it may be concluded that an energetic Terpsichore is out of style.

Even discounting the persistent rumors that the long skirt may be ruled out by a rebellious spirit among its users, it is doubtful if the slow dancing of the moment will continue to dominate for long. Ever since the elastic pattern of the fox trot opened the way to personal ingenuity in the matter of dance steps there have been those who jumped when they danced and those who glided, each class according to its conceptions of what constitutes a good time on the dance floor. In the end, orchestra and dance-hall managers willing, it will continue just that way—jumping and gliding.

Habits in Food.

Cabbages, rutabagas, tomatoes, turnips, cauliflower, grapefruit, celery, carrots, cucumbers, spinach, lettuce and grapes filled 691,941 railroad cars in 1920. In 1929, they filled 1,068,666 cars. The food experts discern therein a moral in food habits.

They say that Americans are learning how to choose their food more intelligently. They are eating twice the quantity of fruit and vegetables they formerly did and are constantly increasing their consumption of milk and other dairy products. Various statistics are produced from the resources of the department of agriculture to support their beliefs.

The food experts say that American diet habits have been changed by two factors: education and cost. People are eating great quantities of lettuce, spinach and celery, for instance, because they have been told that these vegetables are rich in vitamins. It matters little that vitamin is a decidedly vague word in their vocabularies; they must have them and that is enough.

The factor of cost is much more understandable. The average American formerly was supposed to have consumed sixty-three pounds of beef at the end of every year, but now he only is responsible for approximately fifty pounds. The experts believe that mounting prices caused this decrease.

In another ten years, it may be presumed that Americans will have discovered new things to eat and that the distinguishing characteristics of those new things will be their health-giving properties. With no intention of discouraging the super-public that is to be result eventually from eating the right things at the right time and in the right place, it is excusable to suspect that habits in food will continue to change and change radically every ten years or so.

A New York woman, sued by a Kansas City attorney for $50,000 for securing her a divorce, says that she was very fond of him and imagined that he was very fond of her and that she thought he was rendering his services for love. If she has to pay $50,000 as a divorce fee, she will come mighty near knowing that love and the law do not necessarily go hand in hand.

An Old Ohio Map.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH.

A map recently came to light in Columbus—a map of Ohio published in 1821. It was found among the old papers belonging to ancestors of H. H. Mingus. The map's author was John Kilbourn, who in spite of the fact that the name as it appears on the map is spelled with a final "e," was a nephew of the Rev. James Kilbourn who was founder of Worthington.

It is interesting to note the absence of Lucas, Fulton, Ottawa, Defiance, Erie, Wyandot, Lake, Summit, Mahoning, Ashland, Noble, Carroll, Auglaize and Morrow counties. They had not then been established. The Auglaize river is laid down, but the name is spelled without the "l" in the last syllable. The name of the Connecut river is spelled "Conneaught." Opposite Lower Sandusky—Fremont—on the Sandusky river, is marked "Croganaville."

The Olentangy river bears the name of "Whetstone," the name by which the early settlers knew it, and Darby creek, which has been said to be the original Olentangy, bears the name of "Darby" as now.

Both of the Ohio-Michigan boundaries are shown, the upper one marked "northern boundary as claimed by Ohio," and the lower one "northern boundary as claimed by Michigan," but Kilbourn carried the outlines of the Ohio counties bordering there only to the Michigan claim line, indicating his preference for that line. Toledo does not appear on the map, but both Perrysburg and Maumee are located.

Franklinton and Columbus are set down as separate towns on opposite sides of the Scioto river. Alum creek is spelled on the map as now.

Kilbourn was born in Berlin, Connecticut, August 7, 1787, and was graduated from the university of Vermont in 1810. For a time he was principal of Worthington college and later became a book dealer and publisher in Columbus. He published a gazetteer of Vermont and one of Ohio. His Ohio map was prepared for use in connection with the latter. He also published a school geography He died in Columbus March 12, 1831.

AND NOW THE FENCE SITTERS.

Editorial Opinion.

AN EVOLUTING PROPHECY.

Nearly fifty years ago the Constitution editorially deprecated a speech made to an audience of former confederate soldiers by Jefferson Davis, then lately the president of the ill-fated confederate states. In that speech Mr. Davis said of the cause over whose bloody career he had presided: "The cause is not lost; it is only sleeping."

In the parlous political day when that remark was made there was fear that it might be misconstrued and assailed as an incitement by Mr. Davis to the southern people to keep alive their hopes for a separate southern nation. It afterwards was made plain that the great southern leader had no such purpose hidden in his speech.

Now it is quite obvious that the statement quoted was a seer's prophecy of things to come. Today the non-separatist principle of state's rights, which was the real core of the secession adventure, is coming into life and taking front rank as a governmental issue of the near future. So that "cause" was not permanently lost by the collapse of the southern confederacy. It has been "sleeping" while ancient sovereigny rights of the states have been scapped from them by usurpations of congress and supreme court rulings.

A present view of our highly-centralized federal government is warning the conservative people of the nation that reverse levers must be thrown in the government mechanism and old essential rights of states recovered to them—and the sooner the better for the states and federal system.—Atlanta Constitution.

ARKANSAS AND THE METEORITE.

Arkansas has sustained a loss, says the Arkansas Gazette, in the removal from that state of the meteorite which fell near Paragould on February 17 last. "It must always be a reason for regret that his Arkansas meteorite was not put in the rotunda of the state capitol or in a museum in this state," observes the Little Rock paper.

And it is a good reason for regret in the state that received this special-delivery package from outer space. The 820-pound piece of meteoric stone now in the Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago is one of the largest ever known to fall. And while the name of the state and city to which it was addressed must be destroyed as it struck the atmosphere of the earth, there is no doubt that it arrived at the place to which it was sent. As it approached the earth, after its wanderings through space, it had a plain view of all of the forty-eight states, and it headed tsraight for Arkansas.

Should a state turn away a visitor that has traveled possibly millions of miles looking for an attractive home? No one knows where this meteorite started, or what calamity separated it from larger bodies in the heavens, or by what route it reached the earth. But it stands to reason that if it had wanted to reside in Chicago it would not have landed in the vicinity of Paragould.

A state can not expect to keep and perhaps would not want all the summer tourists who come to visit it in motor cars. But it should keep its meteorites.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A BLOW TO BEAUTY.

Successful business and professional women, and those actively engaged in politics, will be intrigued by the picture drawn of them by a famous British artist. "Any woman," writes C. R. W. Nevinson, "who dares to face the mad scramble in the form of public life must be equipped with a brain as sharp as a needle, a ruthless opportunism, and a skin as thick as a rhinoceros. She must be prepared to sacrifice time, squeamishness, friends and virtue to her ambition."

A far cry, this, from the beauty-is-woman's-best-weapon tradition! Beauty, to the British artist, is a mere sideshow in the grand spectacle of femine achievement. As a former judge in a beauty contest, Mr. Nevinson wearied of pulchritude. Credit, surely, should be accorded his courage in running counter to current masculine opinion on this subject.

His picture of the successful woman in public life is a strange mixture of truth and absurdity. No influential woman whose pay envelope is fat will gainsay the importance of an active brain. However much she may conceal her intellectuality in social circles, where it might conceivably cheat her of popularity or a possible husband, she finds it a distinct asset at the office. On the other hand, she would deny emphatically the need for "ruthless opportunism," and of sacrificing friends and virtue to her work. Her success, most likely, is founded as much on personal integrity as on mental ability; she enlarges her circle of friends through business or professional contacts.

Time and "squeamishness," she would agree, must be sacrificed to the job. The woman who would succeed must cultivate, if not the skin of a rhinocerous, a puncture-proof epidermis that will resist blows to her pride and feelings.

As for the beauty of which the British artist writes so soothingly, the high salaried woman to whom this boon has been denied would be the last to minimize its importance.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Veins and Arteries.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Quite wonderful is the system of arteries and veins, serving as carriers of the blood to and from the heart. The blood goes by way of the arteries from the heart and to the heart it returns through the veins. Every moment of the twenty-four hours the blood vessels are doing their work, slowing down to a slight extent during sleep.

Both arteries and veins possess all the elements entering into the construction of other parts of the anatomy. The larger arteries and veins, with nerves and muscles, are supplied with blood by the lesser or secondary arteries and veins. All the blood vessels are capable of doing their very important work until something happens to prevent.

When an inflammation of the structure of a vein or veins takes place it is called "phlebitis." When inflammation sets in there is an oozing of a fluid, which is a product of the inflammation, and this covers the inner lining of the vein. It accumulates until it blocks the passage of the blood stream, when a clot forms.

The effect of this process is the production of a swelling of the limb or part involved. Pain and tenderness are noted. The inflamed vein feels hard and knotted to the touch. It seems almost like a piece of rope. When it is deep-seated it is impossible to detect inflammation of a vein.

At times the clot which forms in the vein may become infected. Pus forms, and if the vein is entirely stopped up by it an abscess may form and discharge. Then the trouble is over. But if the pus gets into the blood stream it is carried throughout the body, producing a general blood poisoning, which is dangerous.

The causes of phlebitis are many. It may follow an injury or an operation. Following childbirth there may be some trouble of the veins. Influenza and typhoid fever sometimes have phlebitis as a complication.

Treatment depends on the cause and the size of the vein involved. It is important to protect the part from movement and injury. In a week or two the clot is absorbed and all is well.

If the trouble is in the leg the limb should be elevated a few inches above the body position and the patient kept quiet. After the fever and acute symptoms have disappeared gentle massage may be had. Later an elastic bandage can be used.

In the case of phlebitis where pus forms an operation is required. Every case should have the attention of a physician.—Copyright, 1930, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Twenty Years Ago.

It was Tuesday, August 30.

Mrs. Roscoe H. Sanborn, of New York City, began a proceeding for divorce, setting up that her husband had 100 affinities.

It was the last play day for the children at Lincoln park, and as a result there was a great outpouring of school children making the most of their rapidly-dwindling vacation period.

Glen Curtiss made what was considered a wonderful flight from Cleveland to Cedar Point, and was cheered upon his arrival at the Point by 100,000 people, who had assembled in anticipation of the success of the flight.

The Marion Shovel and Dredge company acquired 120 acres of land southwest of the city, upon which to erect its plant.

The ninth annual convention of the Rebekahs of District No. 39, I. O. O. F., was held at Green Camp.

The local ball team batted Wells all over the field and defeated Portsmouth, eleven to six. Baxter pitched for Marion.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel F. McElroy, of Thompson street and a daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gurney, of south Main street.

County Auditor Charles L. Allen reported that the total valuation of buildings and lands in Marion was $11,161,680, as compared with $4,708,340, for the year before, a reappraisement having meanwhile been made.

The Word of God.

Prayer—"We hear the call in dreams no more, in selfish ease we lie."

The Ideal Scientist.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

All sciences nowadays which make serious pretensions to exactness acknowledge the basic importance of mathematics. Number, calculation, comparison of numerical results are used in all scientific subjects.

But it has been found necessary, in order to arrive at the underlying generalizations and fundamental laws, to employ the methods of the differential and integral calculus. So complex and involved were the ideas involved in Relativity that Einstein had to employ a sort of generalized calculus, which had only been developed in recent years. The basis of all science, properly speaking, is differential equations.

It is one of the miracles of science that Michael Faraday, who was never able to master the difficulties and intricacies of the higher mathematics, achieved a series of results, of extraordinary influence in the development of the study of electrocity, by pure experimentation.

Faraday was not the supreme type of scientist, of which the type figure in the history of electrical development is Clerk Maxwell. Faraday was an Edison, not a Millikan—a born experimenter and not a master of theoretical skill in devising mathematical theories to explain electrical phenomena. Faraday was endlessly patient, fertile in devising ingenious apparatus and conducting novel experiments, to test out certain beliefs which he entertained.

It is literally true that he never gave up. He never acknowledged defeat. The result, in his case, was invariably and ultimately, a triumph over indifferent nature and recalcitrant material.

Faraday's first deep interest in electromagnetism dates from the year 1821, when he observed Wollaston, at the Royal institution, attempt to make a wire, carrying an electrical current, revolve around its own axis when the pole of a magnet was brought near.

Although Wollaston's experiment was unsuccessful, it excited Faraday's interest; and he added experiment to experiment in the effort to arrive at the truth. Finally he set up the following apparatus, thus described in his own words, September 4, 1821:

"Apparatus for revolution of wire and magnet. A deep basin with a bit of wax at bottom and then filled with mercury. A magnet stuck upright in wax so that pole is just above surface of mercury. Then piece of wire floated by cork, at lower end dipping into mercury and above into silver cup."

All the features of this apparatus were very carefully calculated; for on passing a current through the wire, it revolved continuously around the magnet. The incident is historic, with incalculable consequences to invention, industry and the wealth of nations.

The apparatus described above was the first electric motor in history!

Even more indicative of Faraday's almost infinite patience was his long series of experiments to demonstrate how to convert magnetism into electricity. Faraday firmly believed in the reversibility of scientific laws. A geometrical proposition has its converse; so Faraday believed that every scientific proposition concerning cause and effect should have its converse.

It was well known, from the experiments of Oersted and others, that one could convert electricity into magnetism; but no one knew how to convert magnetism into electricity.

Faraday was sure it could be done.

He began his experiments in 1822. Repeated experiments, following indicated and apparently sure methods, led to no results. Six years of experimentation revealed complete failure.

In 1831, Faraday tackled the problem once more. He secured a slight but sensible effect on the needle, which oscillated and settled at last in its original position. On the fifth day of continued experimentation he got his effect. On the ninth day, he produced a continuous current by turning a copper disk between the poles of a powerful electro-magnet, the periphery of the disk being connected to its axis through an indicating galvanometer.

Faraday, after years of experiment, had at last attained the goal of many of the greatest scientists of his day.—Copyright, 1930, International Feature Service, Inc.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. M'INTYRE.

New York, Aug 30—Nothing is quite so impressive to me as office workers geared to modern push button efficiency. In contrast to my own harem scarem method of handling my job, they are quicksilver moving about on smooth glass. Small wonder I don't get anywhere.

Recently I decided to restore order out of chaos by installing a high-powered office equipment in a room of my apartment—a ponderous desk, swivel chair, hand-set telephone, a reference library at my elbow and push button fumididdles. In my conceit it was to be a "study."

I even thought up a sign for my door—"The Master Is Thinking"—to keep Mickey Neilans and the like away. In a few weeks it has become as exclusive as the Grand Central waiting-room. This morning two nit wits spent an hour holding my best cane at arm's length to jump over.

Only yesterday an editor whom I desire to impress dropped in unannounced., At the moment I was on my back on the floor with legs in the air trying to balance a frightened puppy on soles of my house slippers like an acrobat did at the Palace the other week.

The visitor discussed inconsequentials, coughed politely behind his hand and departed somewhat in confusion. I wouldn't click with him anyway. Gazing up at him from the floor I noticed he wore both suspenders and a belt. Any one that precise would cry over split infinitives.

In other offices visitors telephone for an appointment. Even then they have to cool heels a while in an outer office. But when they visit me they are likely—in fact they have—to come on in the bathroom when I am in midst of a shower.

What I lack is dignity. Many people have an idea this racket is some sort of clowning. They expect me to leap from my desk, touch them, cry: "You're it!" and go whooping through the house. Or swing from a chandelier by my toes. You'd twitch too.

• • •

A cultural touch in my "study" is a huge revolving globe of the world. I don't need it, but Floyd Gibbons has one. It hadn't been installed a week before the gang gathered afternoons to spin it and lay bets it would come up Africa, India or where not. You heard shouts of "Come on Jugo-Slavia!" or "Two bits on Norway to show!" Hunch over a typewriter and try to please an exacting public with that going on. And see if you don't get the jitties.

• • •

Once I got my dander up nad decided to stop foolishness during working hours. "See here, fellows," I declared with a look as cool as a pawn-broker's heart, if any. "This is where I have to work and this monkey business has got to stop!" Then cuttingly and with a glare: "I have to earn a living!" It looked as though I won a victory. They sneaked off, a little shame-faced, one at a time. But in a half hour they came parading through the room wearing my wife's hats and, to the tune "The Farmer Rings the Bell," sang: "He has to earn a living! He has to earn a living! And he must have perfect quiet!" That gives you a sketchy idea of what I am up against.

• • •

There is nothing to do with such roughnecks except shriek for a cop or slam down the typewriter and go out and get tight with them. Mayhe I would, too, if I didn't headache so easily.

• • •

I can't imagine what executives such as Charles M. Schwab or Gerald Swope do in such emergencies but it isn't likely they have that sort of goofy friends. There's the door bell now buzzing like this—zip de zip zip—zip! zip!

• • •

Maybe leaving off spats or brushing my hair differently would inspire a little respect. I've got to do something or take up another trade. They are driving me nuts.

• • •

But everything is going to be all right in the autumn!—Copyright, 1930, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

Petticoat Lane.

BY TEMPLE MANNING.

New York's lower East Side isn't the only place where the Sunday crowds do their shopping. Indeed, it is more than likely that what Walter Winchell calls the "Go-Ghetto district of New York" is patterned after a similar institution in London, Petticoat lane.

"The Poor Man's Market" as "Petticoat lane" is called, is one of the very busiest streets in busy London. Here one can always find rich and amusing variety—and may also pick up some remarkable bargains, provided one has the buying sense and is not swept off the feet by the eloquence of the seller. "Petticoat lane" is lined on either side with open-air stalls from which it is possible to buy anything from food and clothing to household articles, cheap jewelry, canary birds, puppies, patent medicines, Kosher meats and myriad other things. Here the entire day a crowd surges back and forth, bargaining loudly and frequently with rich wit—and your sidewalk merchant is no slouch when it comes to repartee, either.

It is a far cry from Petticoat lane to Hyde park and "Rotten Row," especially in a social way, but let's make the jump anyway. Londoners are proud of Hyde park and they show their pride by using it on all occasions. Rich man, poor man, beggar man and frequently thief—they all air themselves whenever the weather permits in Hyde park. Hyde park is an institution which dates back to Henry VIII, who had it laid out and enclosed for his own pleasure. When Good Queen Bess ruled the land stags and deer were hunted there by the court favorites—and now it has reached its real sphere as a pleasure ground for the people themselves.

Probably the shades of the much-married Henry and his successor in office, Queen Elizabeth, have many bad quarter hours if they know what now goes on in Hyde park. Reformers largely use the place as a forum and, like Trafalgar square, the rights of free speech are carefully preserved in the park. Indeed, it is one of the most colorful sights of London to watch the groups around men and women holding forth on this and that phase of religious, political and social reform. The most grotesque faddist and the ultra-fanatical keeper of the other fellow's morals harangue away to their heart's content and get a respectful hearing. Of course, now and then the proceedings are enlivened by a dissenter who heckles the speaker, but one who essays to preach in Hyde park must get used to that.

Another milestone in the march of London is Covent Garden market. Originally the very center of fashionable London, it now serves purely utilitarian purposes. Lewis Carroll may have had it in mind when he made the walrus speak of cabbages and kings, because where once kings held sway now the cabbage holds the center of the stage. It is from Covent Garden market that London gets its fruits, flowers and vegetables, and long before the rest of London has rubbed the sleep out of its eyes Covent Garden is a bustling center of activity.

WATCH EYES, HIS ADVICE

Children Attending School Need Special Attention To Avoid Possible Strain.

Dr. W. A. Dennis has been practicing optometry for the last 15 years. Nine years ago he came to Marion from Toledo, O., and opened his office at 199 W. Center street. After seven years of constant growth, he had to find new and larger quarters to accommodate his clientcel, so he took over the rooms at 207 West Center street, which he now occupies.

Dr. Dennis has examined and fitted glasses to over 12,000 pairs of eyes in the nine years he has been here. Asked how he accounts for such a phenominal growth of business in such a short time, Dr. Dennis explains that there are three outstanding requirements for success as an optometrist. First of all the proper education and knowledge of the profession is necessary and also constant reading up and keeping pace with all the new things that science is bringing forth. Second: The use of all the scientific instruments which are designed for the proper examination of the eyes. Third: The use of first quality lenses and frames to correct the abnormility found through the examination.

So many people ask, What is an Optometrist? An optometrist is one who has spent four years in an optometric college studying the human eye from all angles, studying its general make up, studying the different diseases of the eye, studying the countless things that can be wrong with it, why bad eyes cause headache, dizziness, blurred vision nausea, nervousness, squint and countless other ailments and studying the science of correcting the eyes either with treatment or glasses so as to elliminate the above mentioned ailments. Knowing all this you go before the state board of optometry and take a complete examination and if you pass, the board issues you a license to practice.

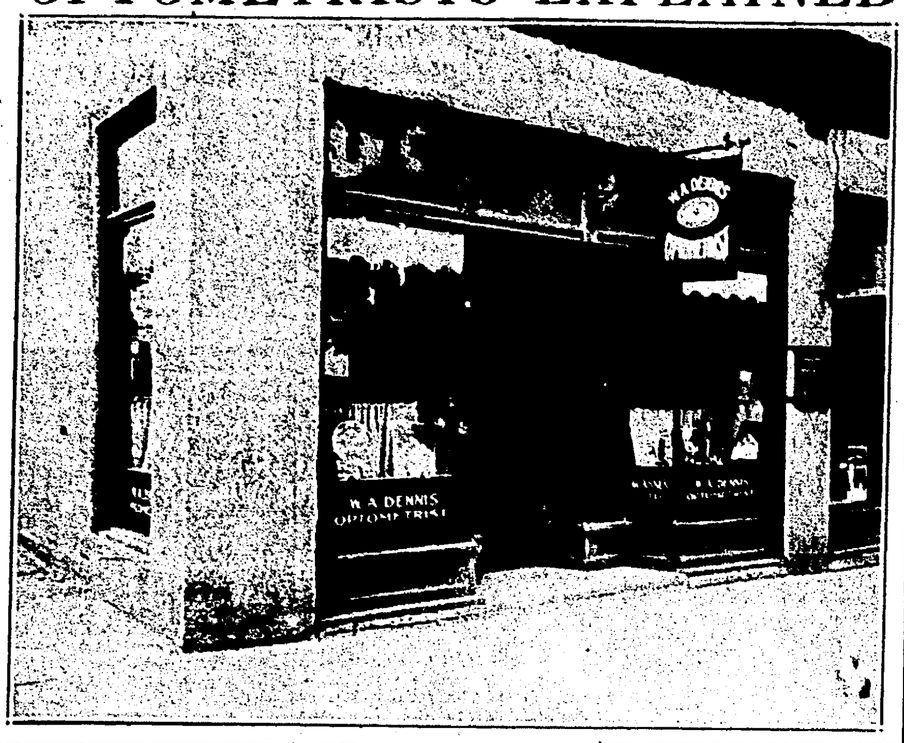
You read in different advertising that an eye can be examined in a few minutes. A thorough examination of the eyes is not accurately accomplished in a few minutes. To coordinate the eyes, with their 16 muscles, so that they function as one is not a simple task; The eyes must be tested separately for focus and together for balance. Tests with letters and with various clear and colored lights must be made. An eye examination must be most painstakingly made, in order that the precise glasses may be prescribed. The eyes are connected, through the nervous system, with the entire body and frequently reflexes from other organs are shown in the eyes. A thorough eye examination should always figure in the diagnosis of chronic ills, especially nervous diseases. Just as we go regularly to our dentist each year, so should we have an examination of the eyes each year.

Right at the present season of the year it might be well to make a few remarks about children starting back to school. You know the happiest day in a child's life, is the day he learns to read. That day he enters a magic world where heroes and fairy folk please and amuse at his bidding. No more is there dependence upon the amiability of bored grownups. Robin Hood and his merry men, King Arthur and his knights and ladies, Robinson Crusoe, Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn, become near and dear friends. It is no wonder that the youngster who enjoys reading is very likely to read too much; and at any time, any place, in any sort of light by which he can see even dimly.

The child should be watched that the eyes do not suffer abuse. As a child sees, during the formative years, so is future health, success and happiness assured nor blighted. Parents, generaly, realize the value of their children's eyes, but often they underestimate the need of their care. Many times there is the smug feeling that all is well and the little difficulties of the child come from a desire for attention; or there may be the attitude expressed by: "Oh, he will outgrow it." The idea of "outgrowing" is one of the most dangerous ideas in the mind of the public concerning its children. A child seldom, if ever, "outgrows" anything.

In every classroom we find children handicapped by defective eyes in their struggle for an education. We may be calling these little folks 'lazy' or 'stupid,' but if their eyes were corrected they might astound us by leaping to the front rank in scholarship. In many states there are laws requiring vision tests of school children. In most instances, where such prescribed tests are made, the tests—while of value—do not reveal other than the most pronounced defects. A mere 'sight test' with the conventional reading card does not show the most prevalent refractive error, 'Hyperopia or Far-sight!' The active eye muscles of youth cover up many defects; eyestrain is often hidden and the child by straining may read the finest print or smallest letters on the test card. Every child, whether or not eyestrain is suspected, should be carefully examined early in each school year to make sure that there is no eye trouble. Often glasses were during school may be discarded or worn only for close work after maturity.

"I sincerely hope that every parent will take this little talk to heart and act accordingly," says Dr. Dennis.



YOUR CHILD

Many schoolrooms are badly lighted. Young eyes are employed all day under conditions often decidedly harmful to sight. Schoolroom headaches, inflamed eyes, upset stomachs, frequently point to your child's need of eyeglasses.

Parents would not think of letting children face traffic blind-folded, yet they permit them to face school work without relieving equally dangerous eye-strain.

Protected by Soft-Lite's crystal-clear shield, young eyes overcome defects much faster, for they are freed from the strain and tension of glare. Children need the better sight correction these glare-absorbing lenses provide.

CITY MANAGER WILL TALK BEFORE BOARD

Annual Convention of Real Estate Men Will Be Held at Columbus in October.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 30—"Public Administration and Private Business" will be discussed by Clarence A. Dykstra, City Manager of Cincinnati, at the opening general session as one of the features of the twenty-first annual convention of the Ohio Association of Real Estate Board to be held at the Deshler-Wallick hotel, Columbus, Oct. 15-16 and 17.

For four years before his appointment as city manager of Cincinnati, Mr. Dykstra was director of personnel and efficency, department of water and power, Los Angeles, Cal. From 1907-1908 he was instructor at Ohio State university; 1909-1918, head of the department of political science, University of Kansas; 1918-1920, executive secretary, Cleveland City club; 1920-1922, Chicago City club; 1922-1926, Los Angeles club.

General sessions of the convention, which will be addressed by men prominent in the realty and business world, will occupy about 75% of the program. Special conferences of different divisions will acount for the remainder.

Newspaper editors guess the most answers to questionnaires, we'll say. School-teachers come next. In either profession, one dare not forget.

Presbyterian Church Scene of Gilmore-Jacoby Nuptials

GOWNS fashioned on Colonial lines were worn by Miss Marion Gilmore and her attendants for her wedding this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock to John W. Jacoby. The marriage vows were exchanged at the altar in the First Presbyterian church, Dr. C. E. Turley pastor of Epworth M. E. church reading the service in the presence of a large group of relatives and close friends, carrying out the bride's wishes of observing the old English custom of open church.

The altar was banked with palms forming an attractive setting for the colorful gowns worn by the bride and her attendants. Preceding the ceremony Miss Dorothy Briggs played "Indian Love Call" by Friml, "At Dawning" by Cadman, "Home in the Heart of the Hills" by Kerr-Lee and "Largo" from "The New World Symphony" by Dvorak. During the ceremony she played "Oh, Perfect Love," and for the processional and recessional the "Wedding March" from "Lohengrin" and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March."

Miss Gilmore, who was given in marriage by her father, Victor Ray Gilmore, was attended by Miss Alice Gertrude Smith as maid of honor and Miss Mary Jacoby and Miss Ruth Jacoby, sisters of the bridegroom as bridesmaids. Edwin King attended Mr. Jacoby as best man and the ushers were John R. Evans and Hugh Wright.

The bride's gown was of white point d' esprit fashioned with puff sleeves and the long skirt fell in an uneven hemline. A large bow in rainbow shades fastened at the waistline in the back gave a touch of quaintness to the gown and the colors matched the shades of the ribbon, the only trimming of her large hairbraid hat. White shoes and long gloves completed the costume.

Miss Smith's gown was of pink point d' esprit and her hairbraid hat was of the same shade. The bridesmaids gowns were of the same material as that worn by the maid of honor, Miss Mary Jacoby wearing a peach shade with a picture hat of blue hairbraid and Miss Ruth Jacoby wearing green with a hairbraid hat in the same shade. The Colonial bouquet carried by the bride was fashioned of Johanna Hill roses and Miss Smith and the Misses Jacoby carried bouquets of Columbia roses. The bride's only ornament was a strand of pearls and her attendants wore her gifts, strands of crystal beads matching their gowns.

A reception for 60 guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Evans of 328 West Center street followed the ceremony. The table in the dining room was centered with a bouquet in rainbow colors and gladioli in pastel shades were used throughout the rooms.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacoby will spend their honeymoon in the east and after Sept. 15 will be at home at 371 South State street. Mrs. Jacoby wore for traveling a dark blue suit with hat and shoes to match and her blouse, gloves and purse were in eggshell shade.

Mrs. Jacoby is a graduate of Harding High school and has been employed in the office of the Ohio Gas and Fuel Co. Mr. Jacoby is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Jacoby of Kansas City, Mo., and is a graduate of the East Orange, N. J., high school. He attended Ohio State university and is employed in the engineering department of the Marion Steam Shovel Co. plant.

Guests from out of the city were Mr. and Mrs. Roy Jacoby and daughters, Miss Mary Jacoby of Kansas City, Mo., and Miss Ruth Jacoby of Hollywood, Calif., Victor Ray Gilmore of Copper Hill, Tenn., Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Schoenlaub of Wheeling, W. Va., Mrs. Evan Reed and daughter Helen, of Columbus, and Mrs. Donald Marshman of Cleveland.

SIMPLICITY marked the church wedding of Miss Jennie Lust, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Lust of south of Marion to Wesley Miller of Akron, this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in Trinity Baptist church.

Palms, gladioli and delphiniums decorated the church as a background for the wedding ceremony. Rev. Lawrence A. Wood, pastor of Trinity church read the single ring service in the presence of relatives and friends of the bride and bridegroom.

The bride was lovely in eggshell chiffon modeled with a long even hemline, with a large silk hat in the same shade, and accessories to correspond. Her flowers were a bouquet of pink roses, blue delphiniums and baby breath.

Miss Irene Thurston of Marion was her maid of honor. She was in poudre blue chiffon with gray accessories and a gray silk hat. Yellow roses and pink larkspur composed her arm corsage.

Henry Spangler of Pittsburgh attended Mr. Miller as best man.

Following a wedding dinner at Hotel Harding, at which the immediate families and close friends were guests, Mr. and Mrs. Miller left on a month's motor trip through Canada. She was in brown flat crepe for her going-away costume.

Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Miller will live in Cleveland where he is identified as a chemical engineer with the H. H. Robertson Co. of Pittsburgh. Both are graduates of the Ohio State university. For the last three years Mrs. Miller has been on the faculty of Cedarville college at Cedarville, O.

Marathons

MARATHONING seems to have the call for those with an eye to the something different. Out in the east there was a bridge marathon and one of the winners was an old lady 78 years of age. Could it be possible our present day contests could have had their beginnings in the good old days when a medicine show wasn't complete without a pie-eating contest in which the winner emerged with a face covered with the stuffing of the pie to say nothing of what adorned the waist, coat and necktie which were more often than not a total loss. While it is a good policy to let sleeping dogs lie and bigger and better marathons may be in the offing, but what would the finish be if someone started a dish-washing and ironing marathon?

Dog Styles

THE remark that every dog has his day is usually accompanied by a knowing wink or a chortle that speaks volumes, but nevertheless the thing as a whole has its merits. It really seems to be a fact that dogs do have their days in the cycle of fashion. Of course your own old dog Tray was or is the best ever but who will dispute the statement that there are styles in dogs? Who doesn't remember when tastes in dogs ran to those hempy looking, soulful eyed Airedale canines, then the German police stepped into the limelight, and now comes the announcement that the pug dog has the call. And what a change they will be. There are folks who remember the rather chubby looking little fellows with their noses punched right up against their eyes. They seemed built along Colonial lines and their tales curled up over their back like a dougnut. Somehow one always pictures them seated on their haunches on a lovely, squashy pillow.

Hat-Wearing

TO what depths one can be humiliated at the tender age of nine or 10. Pedestrians walking near a maid of about this age and as one might suppose her younger sister, could not help but recognize the mingled humiliation and scorn in the voice of the elder as she soundly berafed the little girl for wearing a hat which had all the earmarks of belonging at one time to an adult, but which evidently had won the admiration of its wearer. It really didn't look so bad and one's sympathy was with the owner of the moment who carried her head with the air of one who started out to wear the hat and was going to see the finish.

CHAPTER 34

An amazing Invitation

DAGGER returned to the hotel that afternoon, brows puckered in speculation — and entered her rooms to receive another surprise. Flowers were everywhere. On a table lay an envelope of heavy Chinese paper, addressed to her in oblong letters that suggested at once Chang's personality and the ideographs of his native tongue.

"Dear Mrs. Vaneering," she read, "I am taking the liberty of presenting you with a few trifles to bring you in touch with China. If you will permit, I will help you to explore its recesses, which are accessible to few westerners.

"Chang-Kai Sho."

The following evening she was guest of honor at a dinner the consul gave for her. The consul met her in the hall and drew her into an anteroom.

'Look here," he began. "Chang got wind of this affair—he knows everything that goes on, of course—and put in an application for an invitation. He's inside now—wants to sit next to you. What shall I do?"

"Are you serious?" she demanded, suspecting the twinkle in his eyes.

"Never more so, but I can't help chuckling over it all. He's really a big man, about the biggest in China, and he's acting like a sophomore off his first house-party. If it annoys you——"

"Oh, no," denied Dagger. "I can take care of myself. Besides I want some information he can give me."

The consul regarded her with increased respect.

"Bully for you," he said. "But if he bothers you, just holler. I'll come. Perhaps you aren't aware of it, but Chang has the Oriental attitude toward women."

"Not toward me," she answered "Or if he has, he'll learn something."

"I bet he will."

And the consul took her arm, and led her into the reception-room, where the other guests awaited them, Chang easily the center of interest, his giant form towering over all. He was, Dagger was relieved to observe, discreet in his attention, and she marvelled at the innate poise and courtliness of this ex-bandit and son of a peasant. While he talked with her often, he did not ignore the woman of his other side, and also engaged in general conversation but she didn't fail to notice that whenever he turned to her, his voice dropped to a more intimate pitch.

She early made an opportunity to introduce Howard's name into the conversation. Chang replied readily, but it seemed to Dagger that there was a shadow of reserve in his manner.

"A friend I shall ever prize," he said. "He helped me more than any man I have known. He could have anything he wished of me. He is my brother. But—" the broad shoulders lifted— "in the long run his own people were dearer to him."

"Why do you speak of him as if he were still with us?" she asked.

Chang's slant eyes studied her.

"And why do you not use the word that is in your mind?" he countered.

"What word?"

"'Dead'—the word you westerners fear most."

"I cannot think of him as dead," answered Dagger.

He frowned, his eyes fixed now on the plate in front of him.

"Be not mistaken," he said presently. Death is not to be avoided—it will come to me; it will come to you. And nothing we can do will avert its touch when it is ready for us. There are but three things in life of which we may be sure. The first is birth; the second is that the strong man succeeds; the third is death."

"You do not speak of love," Dagger reminded him.

"No, for love depends upon a woman—and who can be sure of a woman?"

"Surely, not one who doubts her."

His eyes gripped hers once more, almost with an hypnotic force.

"True, and yet—" He switched abruptly into a description of past campaigns.

A second week slipped by. Chang's motor was at her door punctually every morning; her vases were kept filled with flowers from the Tu-chun's gardens, And although she didn't know it, she suspected from the veiled remarks of the foreigners she met, that she was the subject of a great deal of gossip in the city.

The third week of her visit was half-finished, and to tell the truth, she was commencing to weary somewhat of Sung-fu, when she received a second and more amazing invitation from Chang:

"Dear Mrs. Vaneering," the block-like characters said. "I have a matter to discuss with you which is of interest to me and may be of interest to you. Will you honor me by being my guest at dinner tonight? I shall ask no others."

Dagger gasped. She had heard many tales of the Tu-chun's palace, of the intrigue that permeated it, of the bizarre harem of women representing most of the races of the world. Should she trust herself in the power of a man who was accustomed to follow every whim which occurred to him? Was there a sinister implication in his concluding sentence?

She was tempted to go to the consul, to loyal, little Mr. Araki; but in the same breath she flung back her head, the old Dagger of the plains, fearless, self-confident, hungry for adventure. No, she'd go, and say nothing to anyone, not even her maid.

She wasn't afraid of Chang. He couldn't be more difficult to manage than a Villista or a Senussi Sheikh. And likewise, she admitted to herself, Chang revealed none of the symptoms of the petty soul who stoops to the flagrantly dishonorable offenses. A thief, he was a great thief, a sensualist, he was too accomplished to savor pleasure in forced embraces.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

SATURDAY. When I woke up this morning and looked at Jubilee with one eye on the pillow and the other looking up at me, I had to laugh thinking of the Lost Bag of Tripe and the bullets from the air rifle hitting him in the pants and the way he hollered, "Mama! Mama!" I bet if he hadn't had his arms over the other limb he would of jumped out of the tree. Then I got up and let Jubilee down and put on my britches and went down, and the bunch was in the barn and they were all hollering "Mama!" And the Lost Bag of Tripe was there, and he was so mad he was almost crying. He got mad and went home before I got done milking.

When I had fed my face we all went over to the school house and sized it up because we would soon be back there. We didn't see Mush's wife anywhere around, so I got up in the big hickory to see how a tree sitter felt, and I was sitting straddle of a branch with the back of my neck almost in the crotch of the branch above me. My neck wouldn't go all the way back in the crotch because there was a crook in one of the big limbs on the side, and I got hold of the biz limbs each side of my neck and was going to pull myself up, and that pulled the limbs far enough down for the bunch to get hold of them and they were all hanging on and shaking them, and they all hung all their weight on them and pulled down and my neck slid back into the crotch and just then they let go and they come together so tight my tongue almost stuck out and I couldn't get my neck out. They were all scairt then and some of them started to run away, and I couldn't talk loud, but I told them to run and get a man somewhere.

Feeble had already skun out, and pretty soon a man came and was trying to pull the branches apart but he couldn't and then here came Feeble with my grandfather swinging his game leg as fast as he could come, and he told the man to run for a saw, and the man did, and my grandfather told me to not be afraid, and I tried to grin but I was scairt. He made the man climb the tree and saw the branches off in front of my face and then he sawed the big branch off back of my neck, and they had to help me down. Then they both got hold of the stubs and tried to spread them but couldn't move them. Then the man said to wait, and he run away and came back with a auto jack, and they held me on the ground on my side and put the bottom of the jack on one limb and the top against the other, and the man worked it slow, and after a while the crotch back of my neck split and I was out. Everyone and I was glad. I went and took the cops out then, and my neck wasn't hurt at all.

My grandfather is a [illegible] He didn't tell my father of [illegible] and darkness.

milk the dummed brutes, and had went over to Wagmore's yard and got a big bunch of grapes from the row that he gave to us, and then I had came in and strained the milk and fed my face, and my mother said: "Tomorrow is the first day of September, and I hope you will be careful to not get drownded, run over, buried by a cavein, killed by a fall from a tree or shot. We have managed to bring you through the summer so far, and it would be a shame to lose you just as school is about to take you off my hands." I said I wouldn't, but I told her if a feila has got to die it would be a good time to do it just when vacation ends and before school begins. And they all hollered, because my mother said I looked so serious. Why wouldn't I? Going back to school is no joke.

Feeble and Younise and Maggie were there standing behind our chairs and listening to us eat, when all at once the back door opened and then here come Gimmie. That girl pokes her face in everywhere. Everyone shook hands with her. Then we got settled down to eating again, and pretty soon when I looked around Gimmie was gone. And that was all right with me. Then something made us look around and there was Gimmie coming out of my ant's room, and she had tooken off her clothes and had put on about a peck of strings of beads that my ant has got and had fluffed up her hair and was doing a dance, and all at once it was so still anyone could hear a pin drop. Everyone had even stopped chewing.

I felt myself getting red, and then everyone began to clap except my ant. She jumped up and grabbed at Gimmie's wrist, but missed it and grabbed her by the hair and drug her out of the room and into her room so fast she scattered beads all over the place. Then she came back looking as mad as a wet hen, and my grandfather said, "Where is Saylonay?" My ant said she had put her out of the window and sent her home. The idea! My mother said she thought she looked real cute, and I got up to be a sneak and noticed that Younise and Feeble and Maggie had already skun out. Then just as I was making a getaway, my ant drug me back for my [illegible] washing, and she heard that all my [illegible] burnt from [illegible] dance. Love's Reawakening

The Story of a Wife's Triumph Over Jealousy

BY ADELE GARRISON

Noel Threatens Revolt

AT Mary's question I turned to her with a counter query which betrayed my annoyance.

"Has Noel been troubling you about that?"

"No, indeed." Her tone was emphatic, tinged with patent anxiety. "He hasn't said a word, but I know he's brooding over it. He's terribly resentful toward his father, you know—far more than I am—and I can fancy how he feels about having me accept the least favor from him. But I know you know best, and you've already told Mr. Veritzen he could send the flowers, haven't you?"

"Yes, I have," I told her. "But I have a problem or two of my own to work out concerning those flowers. 'Run away and let me think some great thoughts for a few minutes. Then I'll talk to Noel."

The Anger Passes

She answered my laugh and flitted away, while I put up my hair and changed to a frock suitable for the hotel luncheon table. Then I sat down and considered the problems which Noel's resentment against his father and Dicky's jealousy of Philip Veritzen had brought to me.

My nap had had one beneficial effect. I no longer was racked with anger against any one of the three at whom I had been so furious an hour before. Resentment I still felt toward all three of them—Dicky, Edith and Philip Veritzen. But I was able to look at their actions dispassionately and come to a decision concerning them unbiased by my own temper.

It did not take me long to make up my mind. There was one issue of vital importance before us all. That was the future of Mary and Noel. And upon Philip Veritzen, Noel's arbitrary father—half mad because of his thwarted arrogant plans for Noel's marriage—depended that future. In his anger he had disowned Noel and closed against Mary the door of fame he himself had opened when he had promised to make her the greatest Veritzen star. Worst of all, he had rendered Noel penniless by keeping from him his mother's patrimony, over which he had control until his son should reach the age of thirty-five.

If that anger could be placated, if the great producer could be restored to sanity—for we all thought there was a touch of something akin to lunacy in his obsession concerning Noel—it would mean so infinitely much to the young couple whom we all loved so dearly that I felt almost any sacrifice—or any ruse—was justifiable in accomplishing the result desired.

I knew now what I meant to do about my own flowers, felt serenely confident—perhaps too much so—of Dicky's reaction to the talk with him which I meant to have, but I had grave misgivings concerning my coming interview with Noel. The boy had been hurt so terribly by his father's cruelty that talking to him about it was like probing a wound.

But it was a task which must be faced, and when I was all ready for luncheon I went into the living room and dismissed Mary under the pretext of wishing her to change her gown for luncheon. It was but a flimsy pretense, but Mary acted upon it with alacrity, and I sat down opposite Noel with the feeling that I was intruding crassly upon the boy's sensitive feelings.

"Noel," I said, "I am going to ask you a personal favor, but I warn you that it will be a hard thing for you to grant."

He bent toward me, and, lifting my hand, put it to his lips with a charming Old World gesture.

"Dear lady," he said fervently, "I owe you too much not to honor any request of yours. Without your divine kindness in my—trouble—I do not know what would have happened to me. Whatever you ask of me I am only too eager to grant."

Noel in Revolt

"I ought not to take advantage of that, Noel," I said, "but I must. And I want you to believe that I have looked at the matter from all sides and considered your own viewpoint very strongly before making the request. It is because I believe that there is no use harboring resentment against a man only partly sane that I am asking you not to object to Mary's wearing your father's flowers tonight."

He half sprang from his seat with a passionate "No, no!" then sank back again while his eyes looked entreatingly into mine. If I had consulted my heart instead of my reason I should have told him he was perfectly right in his resentment. In his place I should have felt like snatching the flowers sent to Mary and throwing them back into his father's face.

I faced his steady gaze, feeling as if I were on trial. And then he said a surprising thing.

"Are you going to wear my father's flowers tonight?" he asked.

Copyright, 1930, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Noel Withdraws an Embarrassing Question

NOEL'S query was most disconcerting to me. It was one thing to decide privately which flowers I meant to wear to Mary's party—my husband's from sentiment and inclination, or my employer's from policy. It was another thing to voice that decision prematurely, and especially to the boy for whose sake and Mary's I was trying to placate his father.

But before I could answer, the boy's innate fineness made him shrink back at the thought of the crass question he had put.

"Oh, don't answer that!" he exclaimed, with a horrified little shudder. "I had no business to ask it. That's a fine way to reward all your kindness to me. I'll put another question instead. If you were in my place would you let Mary wear my father's flower—I don't mean 'let'—" he stopped confusedly——"but would you be willing?"

Common Sense Triumphs

"I'll be honest with you, Noel," I spoke from my heart. "I should hate it—but I think my common sense would triumph and that I should insist upon her wearing them."

He shivered, then spoke impetuously.

"All right! She shall wear them, if I can persuade her, and I think I can."

"I know you can, Noel," I told him smiling. "And I am sure you'll not regret it. Now what do you want for luncheon? I'll have it sent up when Mary and I go down. After tonight's party you won't have to be a prisoner up here. But I don't want to have you meet your father until tonight. He is too proud to make any scene then, and once Mary has had her longed-for party undisturbed you can risk an encounter with him."

"I must have it," Noel's breath quickened. "It is unthinkable that I should go on this way. And if he goads me too far he will have only himself to blame if I——"

His voice trailed away into silence, but I noticed that his hands were clenched and his eyes held the smoldering wrath of a gentle soul roused by gross injustice. I surmised that his threat meant no physical violence toward his father, but rather the determination to use the weapon which the great producer himself had put into his hand—the cruel, threatening letter, with its unfounded accusations against Mary, which Philip Veritzen would not have reach the public for any money.

I did not repeat the question about luncheon. He undoubtedly would say that he wished none. I slipped away, leaving him staring into space, and, knocking lightly on Mary's door, took her away without his noticing our departure. Once in the dining room I selected from the luncheon dishes the ones which I knew Noel liked and ordered the meal sent up to him.

Harry Underwood came into the dining room before we were finished.

"Have you seen anything of Lil?" he asked. "Or are she and her friend still engaged in searching for evening frocks for their daughters?"

"Didn't they come back to Mrs. Brixton's apartment before the riding party returned?" I asked, amazed.

"Nary a come back," he answered reaching for the menu card. "But Mrs. Brixton's maid is a dour looking person, capable, I fancy, of chaperoning house parties far more sophisticated and unruly than those charming children whom I accompanied this morning. When I left she was preparing luncheon for them, and they had rolled up the rugs and were tap dancing. You should see Marion. She's picked up some steps at school evidently and she's mighty clever."

His voice was filled with the pride which is his for his young step-daughter and it betrayed even more gratification when Lillian came into the dining room a few minutes later, full of apologies for her tardiness, and he repeated his dictum.

"Tap dancing!" Lillian repeated. "Well, if she tap dances in the gown I've bought her just now I shall remove her from the hall by force. It's the duckiest thing, Madge, dips to the ankles all round and just the color of gold. Helena bought Carolyn one almost like it of palest blue. We just had to get them, Madge. When I took a look at the gowns the two other girls had, they were spread out on their beds for pressing, Helena and I saw that our girls would look like dowds. Mary's gown is so spiffy, too. They would have been the only ones in schoolgirl effects. Of course, it's all nonsense—they're not old enough for these gowns, but they'll do next year in college, and I, for one, couldn't be the Spartan parent, could I, Harry?"

"If you had tried stinting Marion!" threatened Marion's step-father, and Lillian shot him an affectionate, grateful glance, then looked at me in a silent warning, which she translated into muttered speech an instant later.

"Old Phil in the offing, with all sails set."

HURLEY STARTS RIVER TOUR

DAYTON, O., Aug. 30—The basic administration policy for Mississippi waterways development will be outlined by Secretary of War Hurley prior to the actual beginning of his inspection of the big river system from Minneapolis on Monday, it was learned today.

Hurley continued his journey by air over the initial leg of the inspection tour from Washington to Minneapolis from Dayton today. No conferences were held here last night.

Taking off early in his army transport plane, he planned to stop briefly at Chicago and continue to St. Paul, Minn., tonight. He will go over to Minneapolis, where the actual journey down the Mississippi on an Army Inland Waterways corporation boat will begin on Sunday.

The war secretary's pronouncement on Mississippi river policy will come Monday noon at a luncheon to be given by the Minneapolis mayor, it was indicated, although plans were tentative.

Conferences with division army engineers and other rivers and harbors experts will be held in both the Twin Cities, where the secretary plans to carefully study the situation surrounding the proposal for completion from St. Louis northward of a nine foot channel in the Mississippi.

FEAR ABANDONMENT OF RAILWAY LINE

Special To The Star

BUCYRUS, Aug. 30—A committee composed of Cline Warnick, C. F. Michael, Fred Kloepfer and John Shunk was named at a special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Thursday night to intercede with the city council, in an effort to prevent abandonment of the 18 mile line of the Columbus, Marion and Bucyrus railway between Marion and Bucyrus, whose franchise was revoked by action of the city council recently.

That cancelling of the franchise may result in the discontinuance of service on the railway is feared by the Chamber of Commerce. The franchise was cancelled on the recommendation of city solicitor as a means of guaranteeing repayment of $1,200 expended by the county for moving of the company's tracks during the improvement of the street this summer, while the company was in the hands of a receiver.

Advance New Theory in Fate of Pole Explorers

Norwegian Scientists Believe Andree and Companions May Have Lived Two Years After Meeting Disaster in Balloon Expedition in 1897.

By International News Service

OSLO, Norway, Aug. 30—A new theory of the fate which befell Salomon August Andree and his two companions who were lost in 1897 in an attempt to reach the North pole by air, indicating they had lived for fully two years in their Arctic camp before death overtook them, was being discussed with considerable interest here today.

The theory was put forward by Dr. Adolf Hoel, head of the Norwegian government research office in Spitzbergen, after a thorough study of the meagre reports received thus far of the discovery of the explorers' bodies in the remains of their camp on White Island, Fridtjofnansen Land.

Dr. Hoel's beliefs, expressed in an official report to the Norwegian government, increased the impatience of scientists and the general public to learn the full story of the ill-starred polar attempt, which will not be known until the sealer Bratvaag arrives with the bodies, records and other relics which were found embedded in the ice of the camp.

"From evidence received so far, it is not out of possibility that Andree and his two companions lived for two years on White Island, said Dr. Hoel.

"The broken ice of this section would have made it impossible for them to go any distance.

"They were well equipped with provisions, guns and munitions. It seems that after reaching White island they built a stone hut and depended on their rifles for ice-bear and walrus for food after their own supplies gave out.

"The severe winter completely covered over their hut, and spring laid a film of ice on it. Another winter's snow then covered the hut and the stones cracked, sending the three men to certain doom."

ASKS RECEIVER FOR LIGHT CO.

Hardin County Treasurer Seeks Collection of Back Taxes.

Special To The Star

KENTON, Aug. 30—Amended petition has been filed in the Hardin county common pleas court by Leroy S. Latham, county treasurer, against the Suburban Power & Light Co., a corporation operating in various sections of Ohio, asking for the payment of $15,283.45 in alleged back taxes and for the appointment of a receiver for the company to take charge of all assets, books, records and propery of the defendant.

The petition, filed by Prosecutor M. B. Underwood, comes closely upon the heels of protests filed by Ada, McGuffey and other Hardin county towns, against increased rate schedules proposed by the corporation.

The Suburban Power & Light Co. operates retail power distribution, telephone companies and interurban lines in many Ohio communities, the petition reads, and of these, operated separately, only the telephone enterprises have been profitable and are solvent. The remaining two are insolvent, it is charged.

The petition further avers that the Suburban Power Company, without authority of law, has begun to separate its telephone enterprises from the remaining two and is about to form separate and independent companies for the taking over of its telephone enterprises, which would destroy assets of the remaining two.

REDS NEARING CHINESE CITY

Residents Evacuate Changsha as 20,000 Communist Raiders Near Borders.

By International News Service

LONDON, Aug. 30—The exodus of Chinese residents from Changsha, capital of Hunan province, was in full swing today as a force of 20,000 Communists approached within 15 miles of the river city they pillaged and burned only a few weeks ago.

Central News advices received here said a force of hardly 8,000 Nationalists was quartered in Changsha as defense garrison, rendering capture by a determined groups more or less easy.

The Red army is well supplied with arms and munitions, and encouraged by the prospect of rich loot. In their previous invasion of the city, the Communists carried on a reign of terror, seizing much valuable property and murdering scores of rich merchants.

Two boatloads of Chinese refugees who arrived at Shanghai reported Hankow foreign residents also were preparing for momentary evacuation. Hankow has been threatened several times with Red capture.

Nanking government officials announced, meanwhile, that the air bombing of Peiping recently carried out by Nationalist planes would continue, although strict care would be exercised by the aviators to avoid damage of the foreign quarter of the city.

Upper Yangtze river regions were particulrly disturbed, it was reported, by the proximity of Communist forces especially in the Shansi vicinity. Shansi's only defense garrison consists of unpaid hired soldiers.

Further complex developments were feared by the sudden arrival of three divisions of Manchurian troops at Tunghoo near Peiping.

STRIKING MINERS CONTINUE ATTACK

Providence, Ky., Spends Another Night in Terror as Town Is Bombed.

By International News Service

PROVIDENCE, Ky., Aug. 30—This town emerged from another night of terror today as striking miners here continued their campaign of sabotage to strike fear into the ranks of miners who have returned to work.

The entire community was plunged into darkness last night when the radicals severed the power lines and then set fire to the Providence Country club. The blaze was finally extinguished but only after causing considerable damage.

Dynamite explosions again rocked the homes of miners living near the mines of two smaller companies which resumed operation 10 days ago. No damage or loss of life resulted, however.

Fear of bodily harm prevented residents of the town to venture out on the street when the power lines were cut and the dynamite explosions occurred.

Leading citizens of the community, realizing that the radicals care nothing for law or order and admitting that county officials can do little to control the situation, appealed to the federal courts a few days ago to issue injunctions enjoining 100 strikers from molesting mine operations. The injunctions were granted but have had little effect on the striking miners, it was said.

AIR MINDED OHIO HAS DAY AT STATE FAIR

Closes Today with Record Crowd Expected To Attend.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 30—Air minded Ohio had its inning today as "aviation day" brought the 1930 Ohio State fair to a close.

Early preductions were that the aerial features planned for the closing day would bring a record crowd to the fair grounds.

The Curtiss-Wright flying circus, with some of the country's most renowned fliers participating, was the highlight of the program. All manner of aerial stunts, demonstrations of fancy flying, formation work and other "thrillers" were to be put on in front of the grandstand. The flying events replaced the racing which was terminated yesterday.

Another drawing card was Dale "Red" Jackson, co-holder of the world's refueling endurance flight record, who was scheduled to perform a series of breath-taking outside loops and to give a demonstration of refueling in air, using the famous "St. Louis Robin" plane in which he and Forest OBrine set a refueling endurance mark last year.

Other events during the day include music at the bandstands scattered about the grounds by boys bands, and the free vaudeville acts and band concert in front of the grandstand.

REYNOLDS ENDS TRAINING FOR MATCH

YAQUI JOE ALL SET TO LIFT CHAMPION'S CROWN AT CRYSTAL

Advance Ticket Sale Points to Good Crowd for Labor Day All-Star Card.

Jack Reynolds, welterweight wrestling champion of the world vs. Yaqui Joe, colorful Mexican exponent of the catch-as-catch-can art. That's the headliner for patrons of the all-star wrestling show at Crystal Lake Park Monday night. Reynolds has just completed his training for the bout with the Mexican, which is expected to make welterweight history.

The champ leaves New York City where he has been wrestling today and is due in his native Columbus sometime tomorrow. His training is all done and about all that is left to do is to arrange the minor details and appear before the Marion Boxing Commission at 3 p. m. Monday for the weighing-in ceremonies.

As the bout nears, Reynold's crown seems a little shakier than it ever has in the past. "The Mex" will present a tough problem for the Fox to solve. Joe is said to have rather unique ideas about the manly art of wrestling and they are sometimes rather embarrassing to his opponents. The American ace will pit his skill and brains against the challenger's unquestioned endurance power.

This long-muscled, weird Mexican Indian is a novelty in American wrestling rings. He has been a sensation wherever he has wrestled and the local show is not expected to be any exception. His lightning-like quickness in the ring has spelled defeat to many of the welter class' greatest wrestlers and Reynolds has trained hard in an effort to withstand the Indian's fierce attack.

The advance ticket sale for the show has been going good and the ticket committee expects the pre-show sales to total near $1,500. Reserved seats may be secured at the Markert & Lewis Haberdashery anytime previous to the fight.

The show itself is a purely civic proposition with all the proceeds going toward bringing conventions to Marion and advertising the city. All arrangements for the show have been in charge of the Convention Committee of Marion of which C. A. Klunk is chairman

The main-go championship bout however is not all that the fans will see in the way of wrestling. The 30-minute, one-fall semi-final between Joe Banaski and Frank Wolfe, the Australian German, should be a terror. These boys are 175-pounders and are considered two of the outstanding threats to Hugh Nichols, light-heavy champ.

The 30-minute, one-fall opener will find Achiu, the tricky Chinese flash opposing Jack Gorman of Toledo. Gorman is supposedly the world's roughest welterweight in any man's ring. They should put on one fair exhibition.

Preceding the first wrestling match there will be an eight-round boxing exhibition between "Babe" Auskings, the Mt. Vernon mule and Joe Pangello, the up and coming Galion youngster.

HALF MILLION FANS EXPECTED TO WATCH SPEED BOAT RACES

Miss Carstairs Making Last Stand in Effort To Get Trophy.

By The Associated Press

DETROIT, Aug. 30—An English girl who can do a man's job on the water was pitted against Gar Wood, silver haired veteran of countless speedboat races, in the contest for the championship of the world this afternoon on the Detroit river.

Half a million people were expected to witness the first 30 mile heat for the Harmsworth trophy. Miss Marion Barbara Carstairs has two boats entered for Great Britain to challenge Wood's supremacy in the field of unlimited hydroplanes. the Estelle IV and Estelle V Wood will defend the trophy for the United States with the Miss Americas V, VIII and IX.

If challenging and defending boats perform according to expectations, the record average speed of 75.287 iles per hour for a 30 mile heat made by Wood last year will fall. Four of the boats entered—all except the Miss America V—are capable of bettering 90 miles an hour.

DARKNESS PUTS END TO TILT IN SEVENTH

Wild Throw by Haflich in Sixth Allows Midlam To Score Run That Ties Up Game at 3-All.

BY BOB ELLIOTT

Roy Rice, Marion's premier exponent of the art of recreation ball hurling is finding out during the 1930 Little World Series what it means to pitch for a bone-head baseball team. Rice pitched one of the greatest games of his career last evening against Calvary and yet got no better than a 3 to 3 tie, the game being called at the end of the seventh on account of darkness.

Rice gave up nine hits to four by "Rube" Gruber but he was absolutely invincible when the Church champions got men on bases. The score should have been 3 to 1 in favor of the Kappas and today Rice should be making plans for beating the Erie Roundhouse next Tuesday. Instead he finds himself faced with the task of beating Calvary again Tuesday to stay in the race for the city championship.

Here's Lineup

The tie game will be played off Tuesday and the other games shoved back a corresponding length of time. This means that Lee Street will make its next start on Monday, Sept. 8 with the winner of the Calvary-Kappa game playing the Erie Roundhouse on Thursday, Sept. 4. Admission will be charged so bring your dimes along.

The Kappas started off on Gruber yesterday as if they were going to make a run-a-way of the game. Johnny Rife, the first man up, looked one over, then smacked the next one over Niemeyer's head out into left and past Myron Gibson for a home run. It was a beautiful clout but a little faster fielding might have held it to a triple. Then Gene Geissler got hold of the first ball pitched to him and sent it way over Myron Gibson's head for an easy homer and the Calvary fans were beginning to worry just a little.

Gruber again weakened in the second to the extent of one run, scored on a walk to George Hinklin and Rife's second hit, a high double into short right. After this frame Gruber pitched masterful ball, giving up nary a hit and allowing only one man to reach first. G. Geissler getting on in the fifth on Flash Baldauf's second bobble of the series.

First In Second

Calvary got its first run and its only earned one in the second. Bob Gibson and Gruber singled and then Young beat out a hit to third, filling the bases. Rice pitched carefully to A. Baldauf after Midlam had made the second out and worked the count to 3-2. The fourth ball was way high and Bob Gibson came in with the first run.

The second run was the result of a terrible throw by Marion Hinklin on M. Gibson's easy grounder after W. Baldauf had doubled. The error put Baldauf on third from where he scored on Gruber's infield hit.

The tying run that Calvary scored in the sixth was a beautiful masterpiec of how not to play baseball. Midlam hit to Gene Geissler who threw the ball clear into the bleachers, the batter reaching second. A. Baldauf popped to Rice and C. Messenger hit an easy grounder to M. Hinklin who threw him out at first. Then instead of tossing the ball back to Rice, Pete Haflich let loose a wild heave to third an an attempt to catch Midlam who was already on the bag and the Calvary center-fielder ambled home with the tying run.

Both Rice and Gruber whiffed four while Rice walked three and Gruber one. The left on base column shows the reason why Calvary failed to win. Eight men were left stranded on the sacks. The Kappas had only four for the simple reason that that was about what got to first.

Rife Stars Again

The playing of Johnny Rife again featured the Kappas play. The "Kap" center fielder is playing one of the best individual games in the series. He's outhitting all three of the other centerfielders and hasn't had an error.

Myron Gibson and Pete Haflich pulled down the fielding honors, the first named with his running catch of Rank's long foul fly and Haflich with his stop of Hinklin's wild throw in the fifth.

SPORT RAMBLINGS

BY BOB ELLIOTT

THIS tie game yesterday may mean the starting of the closing games of the series before 6 p. m., possibly as early as 5:30. There have only been three games played so far and the series has an excellent chance of going the full seven games. If it goes seven games it means that the city championship game won't be played until Wednesday, Sept. 10. At least the last game won't be played before the 8th and this excluding any possibility of rain and tie games. At least the problem of starting the game is going to be a serious one for the umpires and managers to consider. It'll be football season before Lee Streets gets to play again.

• • •

This game yesterday was just about the prize tough luck game for any pitcher to lose. Coming on the heels of the 2-1 setback suffered by Rice at the hands of the Erie Roundhouse in the second game of the series, it was a more bitter blow than ever. It would only have taken a slight twist of old man Fate's hands to wave the Kappas into two victories instead of a defeat and a tie so far. These bone-head plays that the Kappa infield has been making are much more unexcuseable than a mere fielding misplay. John McGraw once said "I can excuse a playing error, you're only human, but a boner, never."

• • •

THIS extra lay-off is going to do Lee Street no good unless they forsake witnessing some of the series games and play some practice games. They were playing at the peak of their form in the series so far and it would have been to their distinct advantage to finish as soon as possible. However about the funniest thing we've heard in a long time is that this Lee Street team is playing over its head. Any team that can win 15 out of 16 games in scheduled league play can't be playing much over their heads. One place where the No. 2 champs are cashing in is in the ability of Braham to go over to his right and knock down drives right over the second sack. He's thrown out several drives that seemed sure hits.

CHICAGO GETS EVEN WITH CARDINALS FOR EXTRA-INNING DEFEAT

Cubs Win Thriller in 13th To Get Back 5 Game Margin.

Asociated Press Sports Writer
Associated Press Sports Wirter

The siruggle for supremacy in the National league is showing few signs of a letup as the four first-division clubs approach the ends of their "crucial" series. Brooklyn and New York, with only today's game left, are locked in a fight for second place while the league leading Chicago Cubs and the St. Louis Cardinals are even after two overtime struggles.

The Giants have regained second place, but are not yet back to their starting point of a 1½ game margin over the Robins. A 3 to 2 victory yesterday placed them a half game ahead.

Chicago made a comeback to triumph over St. Louis, 9 to 8, in a 13 inning struggle that put the Cubs 5½ games ahead of New York and six in front of the Robins. They assaulted Haines and Herman Bell for five hits and as many runs in the ninth to tie the score.

In the eleventh Jim Bottomley clouted a home run for St. Louis with two on base but the Cubs made it 8-8 with four effective hits. The end came when "Old Hoss" Stephenson opened the Cub half of the thirteenth with a triple off Grimes and scored on Lester Bell's single.

Win, 9-8

Boston and Philadelphia completed the league's schedule for the day with the Braves winning 9 to 8 in a hectic eleven inning struggle.

In the American league Chicago and Cleveland battled for twelve innings before either scored. Pat Caraway of Chicago continued his shutout hurling through the thirteenth after his batting in the first half of that frame had played an important part in giving the White Sox a 3 to 0 victory. Caraway drove in the first Chicago run with a double in the thirteenth after his rival, Clint Brown, had given Clancy a single and had fumbled Watwood's attempted sacrifice. Mulleavy singled Watwood and Caraway home. Caraway allowed only three hits.

In the only other American league game the St. Louis Browns trounced Detroit for the third straight time to keep pace with the White Sox. The score was 9 to 6.

PEARS, CRAB APPLES APPEAR ON MARKET

Late Melons from Local Territory Replaces Foreign Supply.

Fewer fluctuations were recorded during the last seven days on the local provision market than in any like period for several weeks. Local grocers have reported business as being brisk throughout the entire week.

Pickles, both canning and dill, slumped somewhat in price during the early part of the week, the former selling now at 65 cents a hundred and the latter at 75.

Crabapples made their appearance in the middle of the week. They are selling at four pounds for 25 cents. Home grown Bartlett pears came on the market retailing at the same price as the crabapples.

A late supply of Tip Top melons, of the home grown variety, also was brought in. The melons are selling at 18 and 20 cents each. The foreign supply of these melons disappeared several days ago from local shelves.

Today in Marion Market

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

Large Persian melons are the only new additions to the Marion provision market in anticipation of the week-end trade. These melons are too high in price to attract any heavy buying but the quality is said to be excellent. They are retailing at $1 each.

Peaches are extremely scarce for this stage of the season. Only a few wholesalers were able today to furnish retail grocers with anything like an average supply. The price was not boosted despite the apparent scarcity.

Cantaloupes are also scare today although their prices have not gone up. They are selling at 18 and 20 cents each.
